Importance of the Election in this State.

Prospect for the Redemption of Virginia.

More Pennsylvania Democrats Out for Grant.

The Tammany Candidate Whitewashing Rebel Barbarities.

The False Cry of Oppression in the South.

The Election in this State.

Speaking of the importance of the coming elections, the Rochester Democrat says: "The reforms which are needed are substantial, and can only be obtained by establishing a homogeneous government in power at Albany which shall have no party fetters to hinder it from inaugurating at once wholesome changes. The entire administration of State will be affected at this election, every officer within the control of the Legislature going out during the next two years. The necessity of a radical revolution in the Department of Insurance has been amply demonstrated, and it will be the duty of the next Governor to place a man in that Department who will restore the vigor and purity which formerly prevailed. Then there are the Canal Appraisers, whose awards have been such as to satisfy the observing that they regard themselves rather as agents for the claimants than as impartial judges, decreeing equity in the name and for the interests of the people. The terms of the entire Board expire this Winter, and we trust that they will be succeeded by appraisers whose office it shall be to protect the Treasury while permitting no injustice. The office of the Auditor of the Canal Department needs to be placed beyond the influence of the Ring, and Gov. Dix will have the opportunity of doing so during his term. The terms of the Superintendent of the Banking Department and of the Superintendent of Public Instruction also expire. It will thus be seen that the incoming Governor, through the appointments we have named and the officers of the port of New-York which it will be his duty to recommend, with many others, added to his power over legislation and the general policy of the State, will have the opportunity of securing to the people a thoroughly reformed Administration. A vote for Dix is a vote for a thorough cleansing of the Tammany stables, and the driving from the public crib of its tools and stipends."

The Redemption of Virginia.

Three weeks hard work by the Republicans may save Virginia, and, indeed, the Richmond Enquirer, one of the most bitter and uncompromising Greeley organs in the South, admits that it "begins to fear that the State is in real danger." It says: "The citadel is always threatened when the outworks are carried, and there is no disguising the fact that our lines have been broken at the strongest and best-guarded points. We have fallen back on Virginia, and must defend it to the last, securing at least our own safety, if we can do no more. Virginia ought not to be doubtful, but the truth must be faced, and we have no hesitation in expressing our fears. There is no doubt but we have a large majority against Grant, and that if our people can be brought to the polls, we shall carry the State by a larger vote than Gov. Walker received; but right there lies the difficulty. Will they come out, or rather can we induce them to come out? We must at once impress upon our people every where the great truth that though the Presidential contest may be lost, we have still the most important point in the contest to secure. We have our Congressmen to elect, and to do this every man we can muster must be brought to the polls." The Republicans of the State, white and black, should see to it that the fears of their old and bitter opponent are well founded.

More Democrats for Grant.

Many Democrats in Lebanon County, Penn., have resolved to act henceforth with the Republicans, being thoroughly disgusted at the conduct of their leaders in selling out the party. The Lebanon Courier, enumerating some of them, says: "In Bethel township Mr. John W. Troutman, Chairman of the Democratic Township Committee, and Mr. Wm. J. Carver, a member of the Democratic County Committee, Mr. I. J. W. Fox, and others, have announced the severance of their connection with the Democratic organization, and declare their determination to work hereafter for Republicanism. These gentlemen have heretofore been among the best of the Democratic workers in Bethel township, and with their assistance to our side, we shall confidently expect to see the Democratic majority in Bethel very soon whittled down to the little point of nothing."

Greeley Ignoring Rebel Barbarities.

Greeley's recent speeches have astounded many of his old friends. The Harrisburg (Penn.) Telegraph, after reading some of them, asks: "Could any one have supposed that Horace Greeley would ever have got so low in the dust at the feet of rebels as to whitewash the rebel barbarities committed on Union prisoners? Why, no sane rebel ever apologized for the horrors of Andersonville and Libby! What do those who were starved to skeletons, and the survivors of those who were murdered by inches, say to his speech at Newport, Ky.? Can any one doubt that the men who would do this before election, would be like the softest kind of putty in their hands after his election? Of all Northern 'doughfaces,' Greeley is the most dangerous. Buchanan himself was never the pliant tool that Greeley has shown himself willing to be."

The False Cry of Oppression in the South.

How little justice there is in the Greeleyites' senseless clamor of oppression in the South is shown by the Columbia (S. C.) Union, when it says: "There are a few soldiers in this State, scattered through several of the counties—not over six or eight hundred all told. Why are they here at all? Every man knows it was to restore peace and safety to all the citizens of the State, where civil law was defied, and a reign of terror, accompanied by outrage and murder, was organized and maintained by members of this same pure and complaining Democratic order. These soldiers are here, but they have brought peace and security, and not oppression. They are all, from the highest officer to the humblest private, amenable and subservient to the civil law. They have arrested no citizen without due process of law. They do not rob, or steal, or insult, or in any possible way interfere with any man. Who that desires peace and prosperity would desire to see them leave us exposed to the vengeance of the murderous villains who, but for their presence, would today have possession of the State? If this question were submitted to a vote of the white people of the State, we are confident that if they could vote according to their own judgment, it would be overwhelmingly to keep these peace-makers in our midst. Besides, no man, of all the thousands of members of the Ku-klux Klan in the State, has been executed for the hundreds of shocking crimes of that order. Nor has any one been tried under the Ku-klux law. All the cases, if we are correctly informed, were tried under the Inforcement act of 1870, and of the eighty-five who have been imprisoned, seventy-nine confessed their guilt in open Court."

The Press.

The Troy Times and the Albany Morning Express, two of our most valuable and trustworthy exchanges, have recently been enlarged. They each merit the full amount of success they are meeting.

The Middletown Evening Press has been sold by Mr. M. D. Sivers, in consequence of the death of his late partner, Albert Kessinger. The new proprietors are F. Stanhope Hill, late of the Chester (Penn.) Evening News, and John W. Slauson, School Commissioner of the Second District of Orange County. The Press will be an earnest supporter of the re-election of President Grant, and will also seek to encourage home industries and home improvements. A better course in either respect could not be pursued by a country journal.

A new eight-page weekly paper, to be called The Blade, is to be established in Portland, Me., the first number to be issued about Nov. 1. It will pay particular attention to the commercial, industrial and social interests of Maine, and promises contributions from Ex-Gov. Chamberlain, Hon. Thomas Russell, Rev. A. A. Miner, Dr. George B. Loring, President Allen, of the Maine State Agricultural College, and other competent and popular writers.

The Philadelphia Post and the Augusta (Me.) Liberal Republican, each of which, in its way, sought to advance the interests of Greeley until the results of the October elections were known, have anticipated by a few weeks the fate of his party, and ceased to exist.

A Democratic Congressman Declares for Grant.

A largely-attended meeting of the Twelfth Assembly District Republican Association was held last evening, at No. 70 Avenue D, the President, Mr. John Hart, in the chair. Hon. Hervey C. Calkin, a Democratic member of the Forty-first Congress, who was elected from the Twelfth District by a Democratic majority of 16,000, addressed the audience. He said he was a Democrat, but did not feel bound to support the Democratic nominee. He would not as an independent citizen, and felt it his duty to support Grant and Wilson, in whose election the interests of the country laid. He referred at great length to the ship-building interest, and thought that the whole country ought to be grateful to Gen. Grant for his attention to this branch of American industries. There is no fixed policy in the scorched and Democratic candidate, while the Republican candidate had a fixed policy of protection to all American industries. In conclusion, he thought that the result of the elections in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana was a proof that the whole country had the greatest confidence in the present Administration, and were resolved to re-elect Grant rather than see the country ruined by the election of such a changeable man as Horace Greeley undoubtedly is. [Cheers.] He had prepared a letter some weeks ago defining his position in the campaign, but thought he would not declare his ideas until he had a chance to do so in his own district, and before the men who had elected him as a Democratic member of Congress. [Cheers.]

Col. C. D. Murray then made an address, after whom the meeting adjourned.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Veteran Club of the Ninth Assembly District.

At the call of the Ninth Assembly District Soldiers' and Sailors' Veteran Club about 2,000 people assembled in the large hall of the Bleecker Buildings, corner of Bleecker and Morton streets, last evening. Col. Holbrook occupied the chair. Gen. J. T. Owens, in an admirable speech, riddled Mr. Greeley's war record, defended the financial and foreign policy of the Administration, and concluded by paying a high tribute to Gen. Grant's military record, and said that like Hartranft's, on the 8th of October, the country would vindicate it by an overwhelming majority in November. Horace Russel, Esq., and others followed, after which the meeting adjourned with cheers for Grant and Wilson.

Senator O'Brien Addresses the Fifth Assembly District 'Longshoremen.

The Fifth Assembly District Grant and Wilson Club, composed mostly of 'longshoremen, held its regular weekly meeting last evening, at No. 331 West-street. Major Michael Crowley, a Democrat, infinitely preferred Grant to Greeley, and gave his reasons for the choice.

Senator O'Brien was introduced and received with great applause. He said that he asked the support of his hearers as a working man and as a working man's friend. He advised them not to be led by the newspapers or selfish politicians, but to weigh well their choice. He would not make many promises, as is the custom of candidates for office, but he knew right from wrong, and if elected would try to do right. He asked his election because he was an American citizen, and if they did not think he deserved it he did not want his hearers to vote for him. At the close of his brief speech he was greeted with three cheers. Dr. Moore next addressed the meeting briefly.

Drawn Himself out of That Crowd.

Dr. Samuel Wolcott, of Cleveland, Ohio, does not wish to be identified any longer with the Greeley movement, in the honesty of which he has lost all confidence. A correspondent of the Independent recently alluded to him as the only Congregational minister whom he had met who was not in favor of the re-election of President Grant, and in a letter to that paper the reverend gentleman says: "Sharing with many of our best citizens the belief that a purified Administration is needed, I was prepared and inclined to sustain the Cincinnati nominee, and his support by the Democratic Party, on essentially Republican grounds. I should have regarded as a great step forward and worthy of special encouragement, were it to result it making them the party of progress. But the development of the canvass has made it perfectly plain that this is neither his position nor theirs; that the campaign is but the renewal of the old issue, and that the consummation of their mutual scheme would restore the recent rebels to power, with their old rancor, and deliver the freedmen into the hands of their foes. In this emergency my life-long convictions and principles make my duty clear."

Banner-Raising by the Sixth Assembly District James O'Brien Association.

An open-air demonstration was held last evening at No. 398 Grand-street, under the auspices of the Sixth Assembly District James O'Brien Association, Judge Tracy presiding. An attractive display of fire-works and Chinese lanterns, aided by the music of Hill's Band, swelled the audience to about 3,000 persons.

Judge Tracy introduced Senator O'Brien, who thanked them for the warm reception accorded to him. Three years ago, he said, they had begun the work of reform, and he was there to carry out that reform for the interests of the tax-payers of the City. He challenged his enemies to point to a single dishonest or dishonorable act either in his public or private life, and would call upon their guard against those newspapers that represented the City Government twelve months ago as an honest administration, at a time when twenty millions were fraudulently abstracted from the Treasury, and now wrote him down because he was the first to stand up against the Tammany Ring. Mr. McNamara, Mr. Maddick, Mr. Pierce Hull and Mr. Jones also addressed the meeting.

The Apollo Hall Democracy.

The Apollo Hall Democracy was in full force at head-quarters last evening. Great confidence was expressed in the chances of James O'Brien's election to the Mayoralty. The meeting of the Republican County Convention was a subject of interesting gossip to the assembled throng. A Committee of Conference is to be appointed to confer with the Republicans and other outside organizations.

Brooklyn Politics.

Under the auspices of the Second Congressional District Grant and Wilson Campaign Club, a largely-attended meeting was held last night at Latimer Hall, on Court-street. There were nearly 2,000 people present, including many ladies. The Chairman, A. H. Perry, Esq., introduced Hon. Thos. D. Adams, of Massachusetts. Mr. Adams reviewed the services which the Republican Party have rendered the country, and challenged anything in the annals of history to compare with its twelve years' record. He referred at length to the soreheads who deserted the party, and asserted that Charles Sumner, notwithstanding his great record, has not got 100 followers in his State today. J. Seaver Page, of New-Jersey, and E. D. Benedict, of Brooklyn, followed and delivered able addresses, after which the meeting adjourned.

The Twentieth Ward Grant and Wilson Campaign Club held an enthusiastic meeting last night at their Wigwam, junction of Cumberland-street and Fulton-avenue. E. B. Hale, Esq., was in the chair. Hon. A. R. Dyett was the first speaker. He referred to the financial policy of the Administration, and told his hearers that if Greeley was elected they might expect a repetition of the dread riots under Buchanan, because capitalists would lock up their money. Hon. A. H. Purdy followed, and claimed that the foreign policy of the Government proved Gen. Grant to be as great a statesman as soldier. The meeting then dispersed.

THE CITY REPUBLICANS.

Deliberations on the Subject of Municipal Nominations.

Definite Action Postponed Until Saturday, and a Conference Committee of Twenty-One Appointed.

The regular Republican County Convention assembled at Republican Hall, Twenty-third-street and Broadway, last evening. There was a full representation present, the room being crowded to its utmost capacity. Mr. John J. Townsend called the meeting to order; the Secretary called the roll. There were contesting delegations from the Fifteenth District, and the certificates of each were referred, on motion, to the Committee on Contested Districts when appointed.

Mr. Thomas Murphy was elected permanent Chairman with great enthusiasm, and Col. Pinckney and Capt. Paige Secretaries.

The Chairman, on taking the chair, said:

GENTLEMEN: For this political and personal compliment I thank you. To have thus secured, for a position unsought and undesired by me, the confidence of so important a body of representative men as are now gathered here, will ever be prized by me as an honor I cannot overestimate. Our duty is plain. Our constituency both demand and expect that we shall meet it fearlessly, with no motive other than that of serving the best interests of our City, State and nation. The wisdom of the selection of Gen. Grant [Great cheering] as the head of our national ticket has been already assured by the triumphant voice of our loyal people, wherever that voice has found expression at the ballot-box. The adoption of Gen. John A. Dix [Loud cheers] as the leader of our State ticket marks a like wisdom, to be followed with a like success in thus, the grandest of all the States in our national commonwealth. And now, my fellow-delegates, it is left to us, representatives of the Republicans of the City of New-York, to consummate such wisdom by presenting to our fellow-citizens such candidates for our various local offices as shall command the confidence and support of the best men of all parties, and whose adoption by the people shall secure such a Government as our City needs, and such an administration of our local affairs as shall make us in the political, as we are in the commercial world, the first City of the Union. To this duty I welcome you, knowing full well that no other spirit will guide and control your deliberations. In the confidence that in thus fulfilling your duty, you will disregard all personal interests and preferences inconsistent with the public good, I await the pleasure of this Convention. [Cheers.]

Mr. Bliss moved that a committee of one from each Assembly district be appointed by the Chair, to confer with all organizations opposed to Tammany Hall; and that the Committee report to an adjourned meeting of the Convention, to be held on Saturday evening, for Gen. Grant, and criticising the political life of Horace Greeley. There was a fair sprinkling of ladies among the audience.

Col. Duganne moved as an amendment that the nominations be made at once for Mayor.

Gen. Arthurs hoped that the amendment would not prevail. The motion of Mr. Bliss was a fair and moderate one, and while the delay was not of any length, it was sufficient to draw out the entire vote of all the delegates from each district, he hoped the amendment would not be carried.

Col. Duganne insisted that the amendment should be pressed. He was in favor of appointing a straight Republican candidate right on the spot. Procrastination was dangerous, and they all knew that before now Conference Committees were simply trading Committees to sell out the Republican Party. They had good men in their party who would adorn the office of Mayor, and now having the power in their hands he did not want to delay a single moment, and hoped that the amendment would prevail.

Col. Bliss said he desired to protest against the insinuation running through the gentleman's remarks, that the result of appointing a conference committee would be the recommendation by it of some person for the office of Mayor who would not support the entire Republican ticket. For his part, he should not be satisfied unless some gentleman who was in entire accord with the Republican Party and would support its ticket were nominated. [Cheers.]

After some little informal discussion, the vote was taken on Col. Duganne's amendment, and it was lost.

The original motion was then called for, but before it could be put Mr. Andrew J. Campbell handed in the following resolutions, which he moved as a substitute for it:

Be it Resolved, By this Republican County Convention, that it will in all its action, in making nominations, keep in view the past good work and the beneficial results thereof, of the Committee of Seventy; that it believes and has full faith in the efforts of that body made for the public good; that the Republican Party, so far as this Convention is authorized to express its sentiments, still adhere to the principles and objects of reform; that it will aid and abet in all that Committee's just and honorable efforts tending toward the accomplishment of reform in the approaching election; and,

Resolved, That a committee of twenty-one, to be selected one from each Assembly district, be appointed from this Convention to confer with the Committee of Seventy, or a committee from that body, with a view of harmonizing, as far as possible, upon the selection of candidates to be presented to the people for their suffrage at the coming election.

Resolved, That this Convention does, to-night, select the names of two good, true, honorable and respected citizens, for each office to be elected in the County, as the first choice of this Convention, and that such names be referred to the Conference Committee, to be appointed by them, to be presented for the consideration of the Committee of Seventy.

Resolved, That the results obtained by the Conference Committee of this Convention, and the action of the committees in conference, be reported back to this Convention for its consideration on as early a day as practicable, such time to be fixed by this Convention to-night, and that then upon such report final action be taken by this Convention.

A sharp discussion ensued on the adoption of the resolutions, and, finally, on motion of Col. Bliss, the consideration of them was indefinitely postponed. The previous question was then moved on the motion to appoint a conference committee, and, being carried, the motion was adopted.

Mr. William A. Darling said he thought it would be a good plan to allow the delegations to express their preferences for candidates, and moved that the roll be called, and that each delegate name the candidate of his choice, that the Conference Committee might be informed of the desires of the Convention. [Cheers.]

Mr. Chester Arthur said, before that motion was put he should like to ask whether it was expected that each delegate should name every candidate the Convention was to nominate. If that were the case they may as well be prepared to stay there all night. It seemed to be thought that the Committee would make nominations. The speaker did not so consider it. The Committee could only bring in a report, and it was for the Convention to say what it would do with it. He hoped the motion would not be adopted, considering it useless and unnecessary. [Cheers.]

Col. Bliss moved that the Convention adjourn to Saturday evening, at 8 P. M.

An amendment was offered that the Convention adjourn till Tuesday evening. Some discussion ensued, and Col. Bliss explaining that the Committee of Seventy met to make up their ticket on Tuesday, and that it was desirable to have the Republican nominations to lay before them, the motion to adjourn till Saturday was adopted.

The following is the Conference Committee, appointed by the Chair, subsequent to the meeting:

Dist.		Dist.
1.	Michael W. Burns.	12.	O. H. South worth.

The Irish Catholic Benevolent Union Convention at Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Oct. 17.—At the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union Convention today, Mr. Glennon, of Virginia, offered a preamble and resolution looking to the adoption of some plan for the protection of Catholic emigrants upon their arrival in this country. Mr. Medicroft, of Philadelphia, moved a vote of thanks to President Grant for the interest taken in behalf of emigrants. The President of the Convention said, in the midst of a heated political campaign he thought such a motion was out of order, and he could not entertain it.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

A Beer-Stamp Canceling Machine—The Cabinet in Danger—The New-York Central Railroad Tax Case.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—A scheme has been afoot for many months to force upon brewers the use of a patent attachment for canceling stamps, which would cost more than the stamps. The brewers have, of course, been struggling against its adoption. They have recently presented some new arguments, which will, without doubt, be considered valid by the Internal Revenue Bureau. One is that the attachment covering almost the whole of the stamp will prevent the detection of counterfeits and make greater frauds possible than those against which it seeks to give protection. As it is estimated that the tax on beer is collected within one-tenth or one-twentieth of one per cent, already, it seems to the brewers hard that an additional tax of $8,000,000 should be put upon them in a vain attempt to save what is lost.

CABINET BREAKERS AND MAKERS.

The country may expect from now till December countless rumors from this point of Cabinet changes. News is now dull, and the cabinet breakers and makers of last year are beginning their old tricks. It will be remembered that several weeks of their labor about a year ago was not rewarded with a single change. This fact may encourage indifference to similar efforts this year.

TREASURY BALANCES.

The Treasury balances at the close of business today were as follows: Coin, $76,887,070, including $24,883,000 of coin certificates; currency, $4,660,654; special deposit of legal tenders for the redemption of certificates of deposit, $21,875,000.

THE NEW-YORK CENTRAL RAILROAD CASE.

No recent action has been taken in the New-York Central Railroad case, which stands as it did three or four months ago, when the Acting Secretary of the Treasury and Commissioner Douglass, after consultation, agreed to throw no obstacles in the way of the Company's taking the matter in controversy before the Courts by suit against the Collector of Internal Revenue. The representatives of the Company, who were here at that time have received information of this fact. It is believed that the amount due the Government by the Company, as assessed, is something less than half a million dollars. From present indications the Treasury authorities will not wait much longer for the action of the Company, but commence the collection of the money.

THE SUPREME COURT.

The adjourned term of the Supreme Court of the United States will commence on the 28th of October, and the call of the docket will be resumed at case No. 175. The Chief-Justice and Associate Justices Miller, Field, Strong and Bradley are now in Washington.

THE COLORED MIDSHIPMAN.

A telegram from an officer of high standing at Annapolis says that the story of maltreatment of and injustice to the colored cadet, Midshipman Conyers, is wholly false.

SMUGGLING CIGARS.

Fifteen Thousand Havanas Captured at Newport, R. I.—On the Track of a Hundred Thousand—What Was Hidden Under a Cargo of Cocoa-nuts.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 17.—For some time past suspicion has been aroused that the smuggling of cigars had been going on to a greater or less degree. Your reporter has been on the alert for some days, knowing that "something was in the wind," and that the gallant Capt. Ritchie and the officers of the revenue cutter Moccasin had the matter in charge, and were using every means to ferret out the mystery which has been gathering for so long a time in regard to this matter. In vain did a few zealous "Bohemians" try to get at the facts of the case for publication, and they have made repeated visits to the Moccasin to ascertain who and to what extent the smuggling was known, but they were politely informed by the officers that the ends of the Government would not be subserved if they divulged anything that would tend to frustrate the plans which they had laid for the detection of the guilty ones. But they were promised as much information today as it was possible for them to give.

The following are the facts of the case: In May, 1871, the schooner Pioneer, (not of the Cuban "navy," by which the Moccasin has already made herself famous,) Capt. Christopher G. Rogers commanding, was loaded with cocoanuts and fruit at San Domingo. This was not all, but it was all he paid the duties upon at Key West. He made no mention of the fact that he had 100,000 cigars stowed away under the above-mentioned cargo. After leaving Key West he cleared coastwise for New-London on or about July 4, 1871, and entered coastwise and proceeded up the Thames River, near Norwich, to Comstock's wharf, in Montville. Here he landed his rich cargo of cigars, and doubtless other articles, for it is stated he is an old hand at the business. In the night, this being accomplished, he proceeded down the river to Providence, R. I., for a market for his spoils. In the meantime, however, he had them stored in an attic in New-London for concealment. Last month, wishing to secure some funds, he sent by express 20,000 of them to Newport, R. I., and here is where the game was found out. First Lieut. Irish, of the Moccasin, being on his leave of absence, had his suspicion aroused by a remark made by a gentleman, that he (the latter) was smoking a cigar that was "genuine," and at the same time giving Lieut. Irish the impression that it had been smuggled, and also that some had been bought in this city. He immediately went on board and reported his suspicions, and was recalled from leave of absence and placed on duty, with orders to work the case up.

After ten days, in connection with an officer of another Department, he succeeded in ascertaining that 20,000 cigars had certainly arrived at this port, and his energy and enterprise were rewarded by securing 15,000 of them, which he turned over to the Custom-house authorities. This done, he received authentic information that these cigars were stored in the New-London district. In view of this fact, he was detailed, with Second Lieut. Littlefield, to proceed to New-London and procure them if possible. Arriving there, he searched five suspected places, but found nothing, and he learned that news had been sent from time out to the parties, and they had them concealed elsewhere. The Collector of New-London has been notified, and he will at once institute proceedings against Rogers by order of the authorities at Washington. It is stated that Rogers has sold many of the cigars, for which he has received very exorbitant prices.

The officers are upon the track of other parties who will be speedily brought to justice. Some of our merchants are implicated, but they have made ample amends to the proper authorities, and nothing further will be done as far as they have been concerned in the matter. Too much praise cannot be awarded to Lieut. Irish for his valuable services in regard to this important matter, and in meeting the ends of the Government.

THE STRAIGHT-OUTS.

Meeting of the State Committee at Syracuse—The Campaign to be Vigorously Prosecuted.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 17.—The Democratic Straight-out Committee met at the Globe Hotel, in this city, today, for the purpose of organization, and to take measures to vigorously prosecute the campaign for O'Conor and Adams. The Committee organized by electing Chas. P. Sykes, of New-York, Chairman; John J. Van Allen, of Schuyler County, Secretary, and John A. Goodlett, Treasurer. An executive committee, consisting of S. D. Kendrick, George P. Wilcox, Milton Knickerbocker, Alexander Spaulding, Roswell D. Hatch, William C. Barrett, Peter Gilsey, Peter B. Bitcley and George O. Daniels, was also appointed. It was unanimously resolved to press forward the Louisville ticket energetically.

ILLINOIS.

Senator Morton in Chicago—Able Defense of the Financial Policy of the Government and the National Banks—A Great Republican Meeting.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—A large and intelligent audience assembled in Central Hall, Wabash-avenue, this evening, to listen to Senator Morton. The meeting embraced the best class of citizens, including merchants, bankers, business and professional men. Senator Morton spoke an hour and a half. His speech was mainly a review of the financial policy of the Administration and the present system of national banks. Conceding the present system far from perfect he claimed that it was the best ever yet devised. Under the old State bank system $30,000,000 were lost annually by the people in the failure of banks whose notes they held. Now we have a stable system, resulting in universal business confidence and prosperity. The election of Greeley means war upon the national banks; war upon the national banks means the destruction of confidence, depression of business, destruction of the credit of business men, and consequent panic and disaster. War upon the national banks means contraction of the currency, and disaster to the business and laboring classes. The speaker had, in Congress and out, steadily opposed the contraction of the currency. If the volume of the currency was too great, the rapid growth of the country would soon come up to it. In the meantime what was needed was stability. Hence the necessity for continuing the present financial policy of the Government. Resumption of specie payment would come soon enough, would come gradually and slowly, but surely, and without endangering the stability of the Government or the business interests of the country. No mere abstract can do justice to the merits of Mr. Morton's speech, which was a calm and dispassionate review of the financial issues of the present campaign, and was listened to with marked attention by the best class of business men of the city. Its effect cannot but add to the reaction against Greeley setting in in this city since the October elections.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

CALIFORNIA: FOR HEALTH, PLEASURE, AND RESIDENCE. A Book for Travelers and Settlers. By CHARLES NORDHOFF. Author of "Cape Cod and All Along Shore." &c., &c. HARPER & BROTHERS: 1872.

This book stands, as few books do, one of the best tests for general interest. Open it where you will, and you find yourself at once attracted both by the subject and the style. Mr. Nordhoff knows how to use his eyes, and he knows how to use his pen. He gives you in his book just what he promised to give on his title page. That is to say, his work is made up of simple, although often highly-animated description, with now and then a few modest hints and suggestions, for the value of which, in most cases, we can freely vouch. Books about California have ceased to be rare. Of late years, in truth, we get books not only about, but from the land of gold. A new literature is being born to us there, tinged with the romance of a virgin and picturesque country, aglow with the imagination of youth and novelty, yet fresh and vigorous as the breezes from the Sierras. When we read of what California is, we learn better to understand the nature of what she brings forth. Mr. Nordhoff tells us what she is better than any one we know of. Without meaning to disparage in the slightest degree the well-meant labors of Cronise, Hittell, Hutchings or others, we think it only fair to say that the book in hand tells more of California in an equal space, and tells it better, than does either of its predecessors. The statement should, perhaps, be qualified as regards certain historical and statistical matters into which Mr. Nordhoff does not enter. His is a book for "travelers and settlers," and its excellence lies in the felicity of its adaptation to its avowed end. There are no words thrown away in it, there is little pause to air the author's political or social opinions, and no affectation of making the work anything higher or better than it is. Written for the most part in fragments for magazines and newspapers, there is yet quite enough continuity in Mr. Nordhoff's pages to retain the reader's interest. Of course, travels and descriptions of different places, people, or things can always be dealt with in a fragmentary form. Each theme is a picture, or a whole, in itself. At the same time, a certain homogeneousness of manner and handling is desirable when the pieces are all companions, and this Mr. Nordhoff always affords. His experience as a journalist has taught him what average people most want to see or to be told; and he has met the want with tact, industry, and, so far as the scenery, resources and prospects he describes are concerned, with keen appreciation.

"Literatures," says Joubert, "lie at the bottom of the general mind," and thus literary work which is genuine, needed, and cleverly conceived, commonly meets a response that shows the time for that work is ripe, and that its message is likely to be effective in proportion as it is expected and required. In this little book of travel and suggestion the author expresses what others have thought, and will awaken in many minds sentiments and ideas which were ready to be awakened. California is in some respects the most attractive and remarkable State in our whole republican family; and so pointed and smartly written a sketch of it will surely be eagerly welcomed. The accounts, partial, disjointed and hazy, furnished by less able observers, have had their day and their use; but their day is unlikely to be so long or their use so wide as that of the volume before us. As an illustration, compare Mr. Nordhoff's description of Salt Lake and Brigham Young with that of Mr. Hepworth Dixon, and the superiority of the American writer will, we think, at once be acknowledged. Here we may say that Mr. Nordhoff makes one of but few exceptions to his rule of limiting himself to photographing external objects and reserving theories of personal opinions; and we may also say that, when he does argue, it is with force, courage, and for a well-defined end. His reasoning about the Mormons and their leader is characterized by all these qualities, and carries the more weight because contrasted with the usual limitations of its surroundings. Salt Lake City is dealt with as an incident of "the way out"—the quoted words forming the title to the author's opening chapter. There is afterward a very good account of the inception and progress of the Central Pacific Railroad, and a graphic description of "The Great Sights of California." Of these, the reader hardly needs to be told that, even allowing for the vast area of the State, the number no less than the magnitude of the wonders themselves is literally amazing. Yosemite, the Big Trees of Calaveras, Mount Shasta, the Geysers, Lake Donner, Kern River—which Mr. Bierstadt has been painting this Summer—Mono Lake, the Dead Sea of California, the Almaden Quicksilver Mine, the vast forests of Redwood, the marvelous veins of glittering gold seaming the snowy quartz—these are but a part of the sights new and strange, which the unaccustomed traveler from the East is called on to admire. On all of them the author employs his powers and opportunities to good purpose. His story about "John"—who is, of course, our Celestial brother—is amusing and instructive; and we find the accounts of "An Old Californian Rancho," chapter 13, and "A California Cattle Rancho," chapter 26, among the best in the book; best, not only because they correctly depict what is fast passing away, and so in danger of being, ere long, forgotten, but because the thing itself is worth describing, and inculcates some wholesome lessons. The ninth and tenth chapters, pointing out the agricultural wealth and lands of California, will be found exceptionally useful, and invalids will be especially interested in the particulars touching the climate of the southern portions of the State. Mr. Nordhoff has looked carefully into the farming and produce capacities of California, and what he tells of her wheat, wine, beet sugar, silk, sheep and other products, cognate facts and prospects, will find many eager readers. The tables and figures at the end seem to show the superiority of Southern California as a resort for invalids over Mentone, Nice, and, in fact, all other European resorts for sick or delicate persons; and a correspondent of Mr. Nordhoff's, whose letter he prints, asserts that one can live in the named parts of California during the Winter as cheaply as in Vevey, Clarens or Montreux. A climate as stimulating as that of Minnesota without its intense cold, and a country where it is possible to live for as little money as at the places described, must be admitted to have powerful attractions, which have only to become known to be widely enjoyed by invalids from Europe as well as from the United States. In old times, it would appear, people, whether sick or well, could travel about in those regions without spending money at all, as witness

"In those days," said Don Marco Forster, "men used to travel from San Diego to Monterey and never spent a cent of money. When night came, you stopped at the nearest house. After supper you were shown your room. In the morning a clean shirt was at your bedside; and if you were known to the family, it was customary to place near the bed, on the table, also a sum of money, a hundred or two hundred dollars, from which the visitor, if he needed it, was expected to help himself. Lest my readers might think this incredible, I will add that Gen. Vallejo has fully confirmed to me these and other particulars."

As money has become more plentiful in California, it seems that this commendable practice has fallen into disuse. Mr. Nordhoff, however, bears witness to quite a sufficient number of attractions that still remain to make that country, in all but its social aspects, the most alluring on earth. The very fair pictures that embellish his volume are, in a measure, corroborative of this, and will have their effect, no doubt, in stimulating curiosity to see the originals. Our author's sensible and spirited text will, however, if we mistake not, be far more potent to that end. Such books are, without question, among the most effectual promoters of emigration; and we are confident that on this score the people of California will become indebted, in due time, to the lively pages before us in a more substantial, if not in a higher degree, than the readers of Harper's Monthly or the Evening Post. In the meantime, we advise every one who wants to find out a great deal about that beautiful State, put in a compact, readable, and workmanlike form, and to enjoy, at the same time, one of the pleasantest books of the season, to read Mr. Nordhoff's California.

The Victory in Pennsylvania.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

What, in the name of all that is good, is the matter with your neighbor, the Tribune? There was a time when that paper manifested a decent regard for the truth, but since Greeley became seized with "Presidency on the brain," it seems wholly given over to do the will of him who is styled not only a liar, but the father of lies. Since the disastrous overthrow of Greeleyism in Pennsylvania, on Tuesday last, the Tribune is crying out lustily "Fraud, fraud, fraud," and applies these charges especially to Philadelphia, than which nothing can be more devoid of truth. A fairer, honester election never was held than that of Tuesday last in our city. Philadelphia has between three and four hundred polling places, and not more than from two to three hundred votes, at the highest, are polled at any one of them. Both parties have their representatives at each poll, as judges and inspectors, and cheating could only take place by collusion between both sides. Fraud is hence next to impossible, and no man who has any regard for the truth is bold enough to affirm it. The truth of the matter is, with all the excitement, there were still ten thousand votes unpolled in Philadelphia. The real causes of the heavy majority in Philadelphia and the State were the following:

1. Grant's popularity and Greeley's unpopularity. There is a deep-seated conviction in the minds of our people that the election of Horace Greeley to the Presidency would be a national calamity, which they are resolved, by all fair and honorable methods, to avert.

2. The malicious and unfounded aspersions of Gen. Hartranft, than whom no more upright and honorable man exists, reacted against their authors, and contributed largely to swell his major.ty.

3. The war record of Buckalew was so entirely in the interest of the rebellion that the masses of our loyal people resolved, by God's help, never to suffer the elevation of so open a traitor to the Gubernatorial chair of Pennsylvania.

4. The apostacy of Andrew G. Curtin was a help and not an injury, to Gen. Hartranft. The entire plot was so infamous, so audacious, that it tended only "to plague the inventors." In the very idea of bringing a sickly, broken-down old man all the way from Russia, who had been for some years out of the country, to enlighten our people on the subject of their political duties, was so bold and preposterous, and withal so unredeemed with treachery and lies, as to excite the most intense disgust and indignation. The "vaulting ambition" of Curtin overleaped itself, and caused him to fall down on the other side.

These are some of the causes which contributed to that Tuesday's result in our City and State, and they rendered fraud on the Republican side, even if our friends had been capable of it, a superfluity. But why does not the editor of the Tribune (I believe you call him Professor) give some specifications? Why content himself with vague, not glittering, generalities?

The Greeleyites, so far as Pennsylvania is concerned, give up the contest, and well they may. For when the issue comes up, fair and square, between Grant and Greeley, you will hear of majorities from here such as the political world has not heard of since the days of Old Hickory. At his first election he had 50,804 majority in Pennsylvania. It will not surprise me much if Grant receives from 75,000 to 100,000. I question whether on Tuesday last more than half our Quaker vote was polled. The whole of it, however, will be cast for Grant, who is immensely popular with the Friends, on account of his pacific and successful policy toward the Indians. O. P. Q.

P. S. In proof of the falsity of the charges against Gen. Hartranft, I will yet mention that Norristown, his place of residence, usually Democratic, on Tuesday last gave him nearly 400 majority. Montgomery County, of which Norristown is the seat of justice, usually good for from 1,000 to 1,200 Democratic majority, now gives a majority for Hartranft.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Oct. 10, 1872.

Garvey's Real Estate.

The case of Isador Wormser vs. Isabella Garvey was yesterday called on for trial in the Special Term of the Supreme Court, before Judge Barrett. The suit is brought to enforce against the defendant, wife of Andy Garvey, the fulfillment of an alleged contract for the sale of property on Madison-avenue, said to be worth $400,000, the contract price being only $190,000. A postponement was asked for by A. J. Dittenhoefer on behalf of the plaintiff, on the ground of the absence from the country of one Meyer, an alleged material witness. The motion was opposed by Mr. Luther R. Marsh on behalf of the defendant, but the Court held the application to be within the rule, and allowed the case to go over to the December Term.

M. Gambetta at Grenoble—The Scene of Action—The Budget—The Vintage—An Attack on Pilgrims—The Pilgrimage Fever—M. About's Story.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday, Sept. 30, 1872.

M. Gambetta's recent speech at Grenoble has given rise to a number of very disparaging appreciations. The Bien Public, M. Thiers' private organ, says that it is so violent and so imprudent, so hostile to the Republic and to the President, that it cannot publish even extracts, and shall wait for a cooler moment to express its opinion of this unfortunate discourse. The Soir, which is supposed to get its news directly from the President's Cabinet, that is, from M. Barthelemy Saint Hilaire, goes even further. It says that the speech is an outrage, and that it has ruined forever the Ex-Dictator. M. Gambetta has placed himself upon a level with Delescluse and Felix Pyat. If men of talent were ruined in fact because these journals said so, a goodly number of public men would now be beyond all hope; but, somehow or other, they have a way of recovering very rapidly. A speech too shocking for the Bien Public to publish naturally excited curiosity, and those who would not have read three lines but for these denunciations, regarded it a moral obligation to wade through the entire speech as given in the Corsaire. After all, I find nothing so very outrageous in it, and on second reading, probably, the Soir is pretty much of the same opinion, for it says that the Corsaire must have modified M. Gambetta's words in a number of places. This may have been the case, or the first summary by telegraph may have been greatly exaggerated. At any rate, I find the speech as sensible as most of M. Gambetta's speeches—a little more violent, perhaps, but at the bottom tolerably reasonable and Republican. As a general thing here, the "outrageous" things said by public speakers are generally found in the interpretation given to his words by individual critics. If Victor Esfrane had delivered the same speech, it would have been all right enough in the main, but every one feels bound to look for a hidden meaning in Gambetta's words, and to see a revolutionary significance in all that he says.

SCENES AT GRENOBLE.

An hour ago I saw a gentleman who was at Grenoble when this speech was delivered, and his account of it was very amusing. He found it extremely ridiculous—but then he is a Monarchist. When Gambetta appeared upon the balcony this gentleman roared with laughter, and came near drawing the anger of the crowd upon him. Some two hundred men, women and children were assembled when Gambetta appeared upon the balcony, lead out by his friends, and looking like a figure in a Punch and Judy show. In fact, his head was barely visible above the balcony, he being a very little and not a very well built man, and the rapid movements of his head, when the orator began to speak, made the resemblance to polichinelle more striking. But to the majority there he was the "Grand Citizen," and the symbol of that Republic which fills the mind of the Reds with dreams of universal liberty—that is to say, liberty to make a forcible division of property, and to live in idleness and ease. How it is to be done is a matter upon which opinions vary, but all are agreed that working men should now unite under the banner of the Republic in order to assert their inalienable right to live without work.

THE BUDGET.

Thus far high prices have not resulted in high profits or increased gains to the Government in a single instance. One by one as the facts come out, we find new deficits, and a general falling off in the proceeds from which the revenues are derived. The last fact brought to light concerns the railroads. There has been a falling off of six and a half millions since the prices were raised, although 480 miles of new routes have been opened. Taking an average view of the matter for the purpose of calculation, we find the loss as the rate of about ten millions, which will very materially reduce the large revenue tax upon railway profits. Had fares and freights been left as they were, unless there is some other cause for the falling off, the Government would have received over three per cent. more than it will now get. On many lines railway fares are higher than in our country—first and second class fares, I mean—and besides this there is a considerable increase in the cost of transporting luggage. I mention this fact as another evidence of the folly of raising prices in order to increase profits. As easy as that rule may seem, it does not appear to work well in practice.

THE VINTAGE.

The vintage has begun, and there are conflicting reports concerning it. In the extreme south the vines are said to be good and the grapes abundant; but in the northern departments the frost and hail have played havoc with the vines. In the Chalonnais section the vintage will be very poor and scanty, and there will be but a small quantity of Burgundy this year. As for champagne, one can count upon next to none at all; but this will make no material difference in our country, since most of the champagne sold there is manufactured and made to order. This is not saying that it is unwholesome or really bad wine, but it is not the genuine champagne. It is too sweet for connoisseurs, and I fancy American gentlemen find it extremely difficult to find dry champagne in our market. When good Burgundy can be had at a much less price, I cannot understand the great mania for champagne among our people. For my taste, it is the poorest of wines, and by no means equal to good Catawba.

ATTACK ON PILGRIMS.

There has been great excitement at Nantes during the past few days over an attack upon the pilgrims from Lourdes, one of the wonderful places where wonderful cures are performed by the use of the waters, by prayers, and purchase of holy relics. In every part of France the traveler sees colored lithographs of a sharp spur, or hill, fronted by solid rock, at the bottom of which is a pool of water. The rock has been excavated to form a sort of cavern. In a niche, about half way up the rock and overlooking the pool, is a statue of the Blessed Virgin, or Nôtre Dame de Lourdes, dressed in gorgeous apparel. That the Virgin appeared here and performed a miracle no believer will doubt for a moment, and it is believed that the water is under her special protection, and that all who pray after the prescribed forms, and drink of the water, will be cured of their complaints or have all they wish. Faith, however, is a prime requisite. That people may know what cures have been worked here, the cured have put up tablets, upon which their own case was engraved, with a prayer to Nôtre Dame de Lourdes, the whole looking to an irreverent American very much like the certificates at the bottom of a patent-medicine circular. But there are believers in the magic virtues of the waters of Lourdes, and such have a perfect right to enjoy the waters, and to spend their Summer vacation there if they please. It is a dissipation I grant, but a more harmless one than those of Biarritz or Trouville.

THE PILGRIMAGE FEVER.

This year the pilgrims to Lourdes were more numerous than ever, and the hotel-keepers have reaped a rich harvest. A week ago the pilgrims from Nantes returned home, and left the station bearing their sacred relics, and having in their hands pitchers, bowls, urns, mugs, and glasses of the holy water, which they had borne from the well. The priests and nuns, followed by the faithful, started from the station in a procession, and were immediately attacked by the crowd. All sorts of insults and injuries were hurled at them, but as they paid no attention to this, one man stepped up to the Jesuit Father, knocked his hat down over his eyes, and threw his pitcher of holy water in his face. This was the signal for a general attack, and all of the vessels of water, so carefully and religiously guarded, were overturned or broken. The men were badly treated, and had their clothes torn into rags, while some of the nuns were left half naked in the street, to be hooted and stoned by the gamins. It was a most disgraceful outrage, without any possible excuse, and the Radical city authorities took no steps to stop it until after the pilgrims had been nearly killed—in fact, there was no interference until the crowd began to smash in the windows of the convents where these poor creatures had taken refuge. Unless Nôtre-Dame de Lourdes is a very sweet-tempered saint, these rascally canaille ought to feel her power a little about this time. They deserve to have acute rheumatism in every limb, with no Lourdes' water to give relief, and after that they should get three months or so for outrage and disturbance of the peace.

M. ABOUT'S STORY.

M. Edmond About finishes up his recital today, and it has been far more moderate than we expected. One reason for this is the desire not to do harm to his friends. M. Merrene, the Judge of the Court who tried the case, or who examined it, receives very high praise, M. About pronouncing him a sensible man, an excellent Justice, a gentleman, and, in fine, a perfectly gurlani homme. But now comes the general considerations upon Elsass-Lorraine, and in these articles M. About will probably take his revenge.

THE TWEED INDICTMENTS.

Continuation of the Motion to Quash Them—Decision Reserved.

After a number of prisoners had been arraigned and pleaded to various indictments, before Judge Brady, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, yesterday, Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham, on behalf of the people, proceeded to argue in opposition to the motion of William M. Tweed's counsel to quash the indictment now pending in that Court. Mr. Peckham proceeded to argue that the indictment in the Court of General Sessions for larceny, which was claimed to have superseded the indictment in this Court, was a simple charge that Tweed obtained a warrant. In the indictment in this Court the charge was that he obtained a certificate of audit fraudulently. This was not the same offense; nor did it concern even the same instrument. The statute provided that a false signature, whereby a pecuniary liability, or evidence of such liability, was created, would constitute a forgery, and the statute creating the Board of Audit made its certificate evidence of a valid claim against the City. It was not necessary that actual damage or loss should have arisen by the act in order to constitute the crime; and if by signing the Mayor's name Tweed would have been guilty of forgery, he was, in obtaining his signature fraudulently, equally guilty under the Mock Auction or Cheat act—that under which he stands indicted in this Court. The proper way in which the prisoner could meet this question was to stand his trial, as only upon the presentation of the testimony in the case could it be made clear whether these indictments were founded on the same facts or not. On mere inspection it would be impossible for the Court to determine this question, for certain it was, in the two indictments, there were not two features alike save the bare mention of the warrants in each. That evidence of forgery must be given to sustain this crime would be impertinent to the argument, even if true, as evidence of one crime might be pertinent to prove another. Thus it might become necessary to prove a forgery in order to sustain an indictment as a cheat, and yet the two crimes be entirely distinct. Might it not have been that he obtained the warrant by a cheat, and afterward, as he (counsel) had been instructed, forged the indorsement, and thus obtained the whole money, his acts thereby constituting two distinct offences.

Mr. Graham, in reply, said he had never before realized how mean the State of New-York was. Here was a District-Attorney, with an able assistant, and two appointed—not elected—Attorney-Generals, who, on a plain question of law, failed to face it.

Mr. Peckham here asked that Mr. Graham be confined to the question at issue, or that he have leave to answer the extraneous portions of his argument.

Judge Brady said he would so confine counsel, as the legal points alone could avail with him.

Mr. Graham then proceeded to reply at length, reiterating the points of his previous argument, and contending that the indictments themselves, on their faces, presented the very highest evidence of the identity of the facts on which they were founded. But if the indictments did not show such identity, what could be given as proof evidence of such identity? It was publicly announced within forty-eight hours, in the public Press, that the District-Attorney had, in order to secure a three years' renewal of his term of office, permitted his office to be run in the interests of Mr. Graham's friends, and was far from that, he had been estranged from the District-Attorney for some time by reason of a conviction of the latter's malevolence in this case; yet the defendant had a right to rely on the District-Attorney's statement that one of the six later indictments in the Sessions was to be added to supersede this. The prosecution would not be permitted to split the component parts of a crime into all the crimes which were subservient to the one main crime. After further arguing at some length on the legal points, Mr. Graham concluded by asserting it as being clear that the indictment was founded in the two and sequent ones found in the Court of General Sessions, and must therefore be quashed.

The Court took the papers, and reserved its decision.

Mr. David Dudley Field, also of counsel for Tweed, then inquired when the Court could hear them again on a motion to set down a day for trial, on which day it was intended to make a motion to quash the indictment.

Judge Brady said he understood this to be a motion to quash.

Mr. Field replied that in one sense it was, although in the nature of a plea to the jurisdiction. But if his Honor's decision should be against them, they would move to quash the indictment on entirely different grounds, and that motion would be properly made on an application to fix the day of trial.

The Judge said he would hereafter inform counsel of some day when he could hear them further.

Thus ended the proceedings for the day.

The Eleventh-Avenue Extension.

The special Commission appointed to investigate the claims for damage and award and fix the amount of assessment in the case of the extension of the Eleventh-avenue, from One Hundred and Fifty-fifth-street to Harlem River, met yesterday at No. 82 Nassau-street, for the purpose of finally hearing those who disputed the awards and assessments. Messrs. E. B. Hart and Henry A. Smith were present, but James M. Sweeny still continued absent. Mr. Richard O'Gorman watched the case on behalf of the City, and the property-owners generally appeared by counsel. Herman Griffon, Waltzfelder Brothers, W. H. Morrell, and several other property-holders who purchased their land at the auction sale of the Dyckman estate, claimed awards on the terms of that sale, which specially conveyed the ground along the proposed line of Eleventh-avenue, and defined that the property had never been dedicated to public use. Shepherd Knapp and the Institution for the Blind claimed awards on the ground that they purchased the real estate on the proposed line before any such line was laid down on any map. W. A. Haswell claimed compensation for the additional twenty-five feet along the avenue taken from his property by increasing the width of the avenue from the original 100 feet laid down on the old map to 150 feet on the Park Commissioners' map. The same was claimed for the estate of Richard F. Carman and the Church of the Intercession, at the rate of $6,000 for every 100 feet taken along the avenue. G. B. Grinnell claimed that he bought his title to the land on the proposed avenue in 1850, before any map was contemplated, and demanded such award therefor. Mr. Harris, relict of Dennis Harris, claimed awards for several parcels of land left to her by the will of her husband, and never dedicated to the City by either her or her husband. This property lies directly on the line of the proposed avenue. The counsel in each of these cases were requested to file their "points" with the Corporation Counsel before Thursday next, for the final action of the Commission.

Mr. J. A. Havens complained that he had been assessed for property that never was in his possession, and requested that the maps should be altered and assessments changed. The Clerk was instructed to make the proper inquiries and alterations.

The Commission then adjourned sine die.

NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE.

Discussion of the Subject of Inland Water Communication—Canals and their Enlargement.

The National Board of Trade resumed its session yesterday morning, in the new Courthouse, the President, Mr. Frederick Fraley, in the chair.

The first business taken up was a consideration of a resolution, presented by the Buffalo Board of Trade, in regard to inland water communication. The subject was referred to the Executive Council, who presented the following resolution:

That in the judgment of the Executive Council, it any proposition be entertained by the National Board of Trade, looking to an appropriation by the United States, of money or credit in aid of any work within the limits of a particular State, it should be shown that such State is ready to abandon entirely to the General Government, any and all interest it may have in, and the entire jurisdiction over and control of such work, together with the free and unrestricted right of way, and a release of all private ownership.

Mr. Hazzard, of Buffalo, said that this being a national question, it was argued that it was the duty of the general Government to improve inland water communication. He enumerated the vast benefits that would result from an increase in the tonnage capacity of the Erie Canal, stating that it would increase one hundred fold the wealth of the country, extend the area of population, and make a grand highway to the West. He then gave an elaborate history of the canal, showing its effect in the reduction of the rates of freight. The transportation of grain in 1850 was two hundred millions of bushels, and it would double in reach double that quantity in 1890. According to its population, the United States was the largest grain producing country in the world; it was 28 1-10 to each inhabitant, while in Russia it was only 20, and in Germany and other European countries only 18. Mr. Hazzard then proceeded to show the difference in charges between canals and railroads, and proved that the charges on canals were not more than half those on railroads. The enlargement of the canals would soon cause the freights to be doubled, and the General Government could not confer a greater blessing on the country than by making the Erie Canal a free highway to the West. He concluded by moving that the resolutions offered at the meeting of the National Board of Trade at Buffalo be substituted for that under consideration. As an amendment it was offered, omitting the words "that in the judgment of the Executive Council" from the resolution.

Mr. Opdyke said that, in his opinion, the Government was not much authorized to aid inland water communication as railroads. The Erie Canal was not now equal to the service required, and the question arose, shall it be abandoned? He was opposed to giving up all control over it, as contemplated by this resolution. It would not be fair to ask the State of New-York to surrender to the United States the entire control of it, and sacrifice her interests in it for the sake of benefiting the Western States. He suggested the postponement of the discussion to a future meeting.

Mr. Burly thought it was better that the matter should be disposed of now. The canal had greatly enriched the State of New-York, and why should not the State itself make this enlargement? Why ask the Government to step in and tax the people for this improvement? He moved the motion be laid on the table, which was adopted.

Mr. Taylor, on behalf of the Committee appointed to confer with the Canadian delegation, reported the result of their labors, and proposed that the Executive Council memorialize Congress to make an appropriation for the appointment of a commission to act in conjunction with the State Department in negotiating a treaty with Great Britain for reciprocical trade with the Dominion of Canada, on a broad, comprehensive, and liberal basis, which shall also include the enlargement of the Canadian canals by the Government of Canada, and the right of American vessels to navigate the said canals under the same conditions as one imposed upon Canadian vessels.

The report was adopted, and made the special order for Friday morning.

The Committee appointed in reference to the subject of gambling in trade, presented to the Convention the following minority and majority reports:

Resolved, That the National Board of Trade desires to express its unqualified disapproval and condemnation of the system of reckless gambling in stocks, gold and merchandise which has become so common in commercial circles. That it regards this class of transactions as essentially dishonest in character, utterly indefensible on every ground of moral principle, and certain to result in the deterioration of our national character, and we call upon our constituent bodies, and all who are in any way associated with us, to lend their aid in discountenancing by every means in their power, their unwarrantable perversion of trade and commerce from their legitimate channels and objects.

The following are the resolutions of the majority:

Resolved, That it is the duty of the National Board of Trade to express its decided disapproval of a system which substitutes reckless gambling for fair dealing.

Resolved, That the banking institutions of the country should discourage loans to parties known to be engaged in making corners, by exacting such security as would confine their transactions to limits bounded by their actual means.

After a discussion the minority resolution was lost, and the resolutions of the majority were carried. The Convention then adjourned.

An Excursion Down the Bay and to Various Points of Interest.

Upon the conclusion of the meeting the members of the Board, at the invitation of the Grocers' Board of Trade and Chamber of Commerce, proceeded on an excursion down the Bay. The gentlemen, accompanied by lady friends, proceeded in a body to the Wall-street Ferry and crossed the river to Brooklyn, where the steamer Winona, gaily decorated with bunting, was in waiting. Embarking on board this steamer the members of the Board and their guests were taken along the water front of Brooklyn and shown the vast amount of shipping now there and representing almost all ports of the world. A large number of cheers were exchanged on the way inspected. Much astonishment was manifested, particularly by the Canadian and Milwaukee delegates, at the great work, and ejaculations of praise and wonder were frequent. After giving the works of tunneling sufficient viewing the excursionists returned to the steamer, on board of which they partook of a sumptuous repast, and at which much general enjoyment was had. The Winona then steamed to the North River and up as high as Charlton-street, after which the return trip was made, and the excursionists landed at Wall-street. The trip was the source of much pleasure both to the members of the different Boards and to the guests.

Alleged Breach of Trust—An Officer Charged with Embezzling the Money of his Company.

Eugene Heath, of No. 350 West Nineteenth-street, has been arrested upon an order of Judge Ingraham, of the Supreme Court, charged with embezzlement upon the complaints of Eli Ives, Trustee of the Heath & Smith Manufacturing Company of Portland, Conn., and others of this Company, which is now in bankruptcy.

It is charged that Heath has admitted to one of the stockholders of the Company that he had embezzled $4,000 of the Company's money, which he intended to refund. It is further alleged that he admitted that his brother, J. E. Heath, held $800 of the money; J. P. Decker, his half-brother, $400, and $300 went to pay for his wedding trip.

The affidavit of the book-keeper alleges that Heath directed him to arrange his accounts so as to charge the money to expenses. Bail in the case has been fixed at $4,000.

Alleged Larceny by a Street-Car Conductor.

The following were among the cases disposed of yesterday in the Court of General Sessions, before Recorder Hackett and a jury:

C. L. Ryder, a Grand-street car conductor, was placed on trial for complicity in stealing $250 from Aaron Walberg, keeper of a shop in Canal-street, on the night of Sept. 21. Walberg deposed that one of the company, of whom Ryder was one, stole his purse while he was on the rear platform, and pushed him off the car. Witness ran after the car, crying out that he was robbed, but the conductor did not stop. The other evidence was not very strong, the prisoner denied his guilt, and the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

The Public Store Robbery.

The TIMES alluded briefly, yesterday, to the recovery of a portion of the silks which were stolen from the public stores in New Church-street, in the latter part of September. The facts in the case are as follows:

In both instances the goods were delivered by the delivery clerk to the agent of the transfer carmen, authorized by them to receipt for the same, and the vouchers which he gave to the delivery clerk were abstracted from his files by the same agent, and destroyed. A fortnight since, a man familiar with the business of the public stores, gave information to Ex-Collector Murphy that six cases of goods corded and sealed, were seen by him on a cart in Twenty-sixth-street, and were driven to a place in the same street, where they were deposited.

Mr. Murphy thereupon informed Collector Arthur of the circumstances, who immediately invoked the assistance of Col. Whitely, United States Government detective, and put the case in his hands to work up. Col. Whitely obtained the arrest of the guilty party, who made a full confession of the manner in which the robbery was committed, and stated that no one but himself was implicated. A large portion of the goods have been recovered, and are now in the public stores awaiting prosecution of the proper papers for their delivery, and it is probable that the remainder will be secured in a short time. The delivery clerks, Kip and Harding, who were suspended pending this investigation, have been restored to duty, their records being clear.

ARMY AND NAVY OF THE GULF.

Annual Meeting of the Society, Yesterday, at Apollo Hall—A Happy Reunion.

Yesterday being the anniversary of the battle of Cedar Creek, the fourth annual meeting of the Society of the Army and Navy of the Gulf was held, the business meeting taking place in the afternoon, at Apollo Hall, Admiral Thatcher presiding. At the commencement of the proceedings, Gen. Forsyth, aid to Gen. Sheridan, read the following letter:

CHICAGO, Oct. 14, 1872.

MY DEAR ADMIRAL: I had notified the Secretary that I would be present at the annual meeting of our society on the 17th, and now, with deep regret, have to announce my absence. I have been unexpectedly called to St. Louis on official duties which cannot be avoided, and will be too late to reach New-York on the 17th. I send to the Society my warmest greeting, and know you will have a happy time, and expect to hear that you have again taken New-Orleans. Yours truly,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Lieutenant-General, United States Army.

Gen. H. B. Sargent, of Boston, was then introduced and delivered an oration on the results of the late war, claiming that the payment had been declaratory, not revolutionary, and had simply established the Constitution as it was. The citizen soldiers of the country, he said, had done something more than to burn powder and free a few millions of slaves; their enduring monument was the fact that a fatal principle of interpretation—that the Union could be broken at pleasure—was destroyed, and the nation was born anew. Gen. Sargent, in the course of his remarks, said the well-being of our Republic depends on the conservative interests, the intelligence, the morality, and the defensive power of the arm-bearing majority. Wars must continue for long years yet, and until it is properly announced that Satan is enchained. It is not safe to dispense with the musket behind the law, until it is safe to leave out our spoons. The arm-bearing majority must be behind every moral utterance of the Republic. Gymnastics with a musket do not make a soldier. Discipline, such as only can be taught by service in camps and ships of war, makes an army and a navy. I devoutly pray that this nation will, at last, under a broad view of its power to provide for the common defence, ordain a system of military training, involving at least one year's camp instruction, on the most rigid rule of actual service, for every man in the nation, as a finish to the common-school education. The speaker paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Admiral Farragut, which elicited a hearty outburst of applause.

Gen. A. J. H. Duganne read an original poem. The next place of meeting, Portland, Me., was then agreed upon, and the time, Aug. 6, 1873, the anniversary of the battle of Baton Rouge. The following officers of the Society for the current year were elected:

President—Rear-Admiral Theodorus Bailey, United States Navy.

Vice-Presidents—Rear-Admiral Thatcher, United States Navy, and Major-Gen. Wm. B. Franklin.

Recording Secretary—Col. Granville P. Hawes.

Corresponding Secretary—Major James E. Montgomery.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.
New-York City.

The Tribune has one of its ridiculous articles on the recent address of the business men of New-York to the country. It says that "among the capitalists who do not unite in this appeal" are Mr. MARSHALL O. ROBERTS, Mr. A. T. STEWART, Mr. C. K. GARRISON, Mr. O. D. F. GRANT, Mr. W. B. ASTOR and Mr. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT. The intelligence or honesty which the Tribune now brings to bear upon the discussion of political subjects is shown by the following facts: Mr. MARSHALL O. ROBERTS is in Europe, and Mr. C. K. GARRISON is in California, consequently neither of these gentlemen could have signed the appeal in question. Mr. STEWART was not asked to sign it; Mr. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT is represented by his son, Mr. W. H. VANDERBILT; Mr. W. B. ASTOR is sick, and Mr. O. D. F. GRANT has been dead two years! Is not the Tribune in very capable hands? Ought not its proprietors and readers to be delighted with the knowledge of local affairs and men displayed by its "manager?"

We hope that our Republican friends in this State take notice of the fact that in all the "tables" of the Greeleyites New-York is confidently put down for GREELEY. Upon winning this State all their hopes ostensibly depend. Yesterday, Mr. GREELEY'S representative published a real or fictitious extract from a letter, in which the writer pledges himself that New-York will give 75,000 majority for GREELEY! We know how absurd this is—we fully believe that New-York State will vote for GRANT by at least fifty thousand majority—but are our friends sufficiently alive to the responsibility which rests upon them? Before the recent elections, the Greeleyites declared that all their prospects depended on Pennsylvania and Ohio. Now they insolently claim New-York—and foolish papers at a distance repeat their cries. It would only be the most criminal carelessness which allowed the Democrats and GREELEY to snatch the State from us; are our friends in danger of falling into this carelessness? We have no serious apprehensions on the subject, but our watchword throughout this campaign has been caution, and we repeat it now. Do not be over-confident. Violence and fraud may deprive us of the Southern vote, and New-York may be all-important to us. Are you working up your districts? Do you understand that every vote is of value to us? If so, we are safe. But if there is any mistake on these points, we shall not lose the Presidential contest, but we may lose our State ticket. We exhort Republicans everywhere to work just as if they feared to lose the day.

The Democrats assert that the "united South" will be with them. They will use violence, just as they did in Georgia. But a free and fair vote must be insured to the people, and the Election law must be properly enforced. The shameful scenes enacted in Georgia must not be repeated all over the South. The powers conferred by Congress must be used, if the ruffians of the Democratic Party provoke them. We hope there will be no fear or hesitation shown in this matter, for although ETHAN ALLEN, on behalf of GREELEY, threatens a "revolution" if Gen. GRANT is re-elected, we cannot allow the gang to throw the country into disturbance before their defeat.

The World a little while ago denounced GREELEY as a fraud: said that the Democracy never could be brought to support him—that a "thousand national conventions could not effect a result so unnatural;" that he would prove an "ignominious failure" as a candidate; that his acceptance by the Baltimore Convention would involve "an inglorious defeat and the destruction of the (Democratic) Party;" that he was "perverse, ignorant, wrongheaded, sophistical, and argumentatively dishonest;" that "his views are at all points opposite to those of the Democratic Party;" that he was "a fanatic and a charlatan," &c., &c. That was the "honest" opinion of the World only a few weeks ago. Of course it had not the pluck to stick to it. Yesterday it told the Democrats to be sure and vote for the candidate whom it stigmatized as above, and said, "We only ask of them to stand by their colors and not desert their principles!" If Democrats are guided by the last part of this advice, they will, even on the World's own showing, vote against GREELEY. The World has a very short memory—but intelligent Democrats have a longer one, with a conscience into the bargain.

In our special dispatch from Atlanta, Ga., will be found some additional instances of the kind of "reconciliation" which was practiced at the recent State election. The party which made at Baltimore a pretense of accepting all the Constitutional Amendments showed at the Georgia election that their ideal of negro suffrage was to stand over gangs of colored voters, and threaten "to cut their hearts out" unless they voted the Democratic ticket. Is the Federal Government to be invited to stand quietly by, and see outrages like this repeated on the 5th of November?

The Republicans and the Mayoralty.

It seems to us, and we believe the impression is shared by the public at large, that more than enough time has already been wasted over the selection of a Reform candidate for the Mayoralty. We know nothing of the influences which moved the Republican Convention last night to defer making a nomination, and we are equally at a loss to understand what materials were needed for forming a judgment which can be supplied between now and to-morrow evening. The members of the party at large have decided convictions on the subject, and the delegates who are supposed to represent them have had time enough to learn the feelings of their constituents, and to be prepared to give them adequate expression. All this appearance of higgling, and this display of weak hesitation, has a bad effect on the public mind, already becoming sufficiently apathetic on the subject. It has been left to the Republican Party to give shape and impetus to the struggle on behalf of local reform. Any appearance of unwillingness to frankly accept the responsibilities of the position must tell against the prospects of our State ticket, and will be eagerly seized upon by our opponents as a proof that we mean to keep the promise of national and State reform to the ear and break it to the hope. The Republican Party of New-York cannot shift the onus of determining for good or evil the future of the government of the commercial Metropolis of the Union. If they throw away the opportunity which they possess now of determining it for good, the party at large can no more escape the stain which it will leave upon their record, than could the Democracy escape the disgrace which followed upon the crimes of Tammany.

Now, however, that a Conference Committee has been appointed, let its members see to it that its proceedings are something more than a mere sham. If the Reform organizations of the City are worth a formal consultation on matters about which their opinions are tolerably well known, then their wishes must certainly be allowed to weigh with very appreciable force in the ultimate decision. The Republican Convention has, at least, committed itself to the position that the candidate for the Mayoralty, and those for the other local offices, should be selected with a view of concentrating the entire Reform vote as effectively as possible. Delay is bad enough, but if, after sacrificing two days that could ill be spared from the pending canvass, the representatives of the Republican Party give the lie to all the reasons that could be urged for delay, we can tell them beforehand what verdict they may expect, both from the honest men of their party, and the honest majority of the people of New-York.

New-York in November.

That a great deal was gained for reform, last year, in this State, no one will question. Yet what was done was mainly removing the immediate results of Tammany rule, leaving the system by which that rule had been acquired still formidable. The worst of the Judges were got off the Bench; some limit—none too strict—was put on unlawful expenditures in this City; Registry laws for New-York and Brooklyn, designed to secure an honest election in these cities, were passed; and action was taken which made possible the overthrow of the great Erie Ring. This was about all. The Government of New-York City remains a tempting prize for the struggles of corrupt politicians, and the Government of the State is a still greater one. The election of unworthy men to office would suffice to overthrow nearly everything we have gained. If the people do not see this, their old enemies, the Tammany men, do. Why else are they so active for KERNAN and DEPEW, and for a coalition majority in the Assembly? Do our friends think the leopard has changed his spots, and that the crowd of hungry politicians who have always fed on Tammany are now flocking around the "Liberal-Democratic" candidates out of admiration for their purity, and with an unselfish desire to see good men elected?

Tammany is trying the respectable dodge now in both State and City. It was always a favorite one, but the day has gone by when it would serve to hoodwink the people. Since those unfortunate merchant princes certified that Controller CONNOLLY'S books were a miracle of accuracy and honesty, the people do not depend so much on a man's negative reputation as on his associations, and the solid guarantees he can give of honesty and firmness. We are told that the present Democratic candidate for Governor is little less than a saint. We have proved repeatedly that his intense virtue did not prevent him from getting elected to Congress on the false pretense that he was in favor of the war, and then betraying his pledges. It was this piece of peculiarly Democratic morality that cost him his seat when he came up for re-election. Is such a man likely to be true to reform?

The people of this State can afford to take no chances as to the character of their Governor and Assembly this year. There is too much at stake. We saw last Winter how much a Tammany Governor, and a lower branch of the Legislature in which Tammany Republicans held the balance of power, could do in blocking all measures of real reform. Fully as much can be done by a similarly adverse combination next Winter. Even a session of the Legislature in which reform was not advanced would be a disaster. It would be one of those drawn battles between the right and the wrong, which are equivalent to defeat for the right, and which cripple and delay it beyond measure. A mongrel Government, with a Senate of one party and a House of another, and with a Governor opposed to an important portion of the State officers, is, moreover, bound to be a source of confusion and demoralization. In the case of the election of KERNAN and DEPEW, we have no hesitation in saying that it would be a source of corruption as well.

In saying this we do not need to say that Mr. KERNAN would take bribes or Mr. DEPEW give them. The career of Gov. HOFFMAN is proof enough, if proof were needed, that an eminently respectable and even honorable reputation may not prevent the most shameful neglect of duty. Mr. HOFFMAN has just started on an extended "stumping" tour for the Democratic ticket, and his supporters make it the occasion to reiterate the stale platitudes about the "affection" and "esteem" entertained for him by the people. But not the name of TWEED himself is more irrevocably associated with the monstrous frauds of the Ring than that of the Governor who approved the Ring charter, and the unlawful tax levies, who signed the Erie Classification bill, who was always blind to the existence of Democratic corruption, and who only last Winter did everything in his power—and that was much—to protect the Ring from the people. Do the honest part of the people suppose KERNAN—linked with DEPEW—would serve them any better than HOFFMAN did? HOFFMAN, and the politicians who "ran" HOFFMAN, are all for KERNAN. Is it likely that KERNAN would not be for them if he gained the opportunity?

These are considerations that must be weighed. There is nothing more important than a victory for honest government in our State election. The Tammany coalition is laboring to carry out an elaborate scheme, begun nearly a year ago, and of which the nomination of GREELEY was a part. That scheme had for its object the re-establishment of the Ring. The people of the State must say on election day whether the scheme shall succeed or fail.

Catching a Democratic Tartar.

The old story and the common apothegm of catching a tartar never had more significant illustration than in the result of the attacks upon Gen. DIX. No sooner was that accomplished gentleman, upright man, and sterling old-school Democrat nominated by the Republican Party as Governor, than he was accused by the Tribune and the World of being a corrupt politician and a mercenary place-seeker. The result we all know. These attacks only furnished the opportunity of showing by the records of past years that so far was he from being a place-seeker, that he refused offices that were offered him; that so far was he from being mercenary, that he took the smaller salary instead of the larger; and that so far was he from being corrupt, that he refused to conform to the common practices of the politicians of his day and his party in the use of patronage. The attempt to deprive him of the credit of the famous order in regard to the American flag, and to transfer it to Mr. STANTON, only brought out evidence under Mr. STANTON'S own hand that the order originated with Gen. DIX alone, and that he alone assumed its responsibility. But in nothing was the result of this slanderous policy more remarkable than in its exposure of the falseness and the hypocrisy of the Democratic outcry against Gen. GRANT'S Administration, for its alleged abuse of the civil service for political ends. To these accusations the supporters of the present Administration have been able to interpose, first a general denial, and next the fact that the abuses in question, which Gen. GRANT has been the first of our Presidents deliberately, openly and systematically to oppose, to the full extent of his lawful power, were of Democratic origin, and of long standing; and that the present Administration was no more responsible for them than it was for the authorship of Gov. MARCY'S saying "to the victors belong the spoils."

And now these mean attempts to detract from Gen. DIX'S political integrity and personal disinterestedness, have been the means of bringing out two admirable letters of his, twelve years old, which not only absolve him utterly from all such charges, but establish beyond cavil the truth of the plea that, for the bad practices in question with regard to the civil service, the Democrats and not the Republicans are responsible. The Democratic politicians, during their long lease of power, had established it as a kind of law or imperative custom in politics that the patronage of office was to be used, not for the good of the service, but to build up and sustain the political influence of members of Congress, and that all persons in office, down to the poorest-paid clerk in every civil department of the Government, must pay an "assessment" upon his services for the good of the party. It is a Democrat who tells this, we cannot say reveals it, for it was already known. And he tells it not to Republicans for the purpose of injuring his old political associates—it is brought out by Democrats themselves, that years ago he refused to submit to the discipline of his party upon this point, and in a manner at once frank, courteous, and firm declared that these practices were ruinous both to the country and to his party. It was a Democratic officer writing to a dictatorial Democratic member of Congress, who said that he regarded the practice of "appointing persons to employments for the purpose of aiding candidates for Congress," as "one of the grossest abuses under the Government," and one which has "done quite as much as anything to impair the confidence of the community in public men, and [woful and truthful premonition] to reduce the Democratic Party to its present unhopeful condition."

It was a Democrat writing to a Democrat who protested against the "degrading practice which has existed of sending political tax-gatherers to the doors of the pay-room to levy contributions on the clerks as they emerge with their hard-earned stipends." It was a Democrat who then boldly declared to a Democratic political committee, "I cannot allow this office to be so dishonored." It is not surprising that a man so pure, so firm, so patriotic, found it impossible to remain in a political organization that sought to build up its power and prop up its tottering existence by such practices. It was inevitable that such a man, even if it had not been for the dislocating power of the great rebellion, should soon find himself in the ranks of that party whose Administration has been the first to begin to root up this evil weed, the growth of a generation of Democratic misrule and plunder. And now that these civil service reform hypocrites have brought this revelation upon their own heads, perhaps we shall see a little less of their crocodile crying on this subject. But if this is too much to expect, we may, at least, be sure that the discomfiting result of these attacks will be to absolve Gen. GRANT'S Administration from the responsibility of abuses that were firmly established before he received his Lieutenant's commission, and to make Gen. DIX'S election to the not very lucrative office of Governor of New-York the more certain.

Make All Sure.

Fortunately for the nation, the Greeley leaders do not show the slightest capacity for political strategy. Starting out by sacrificing principle in the formation of a palpably corrupt coalition, at the head of which they put a man notoriously unfit for any executive office, their subsequent proceedings seem to have been intended as rivals to the stupendous blunders of the beginning. Finding their greatest delight and principal occupation in the coinage and circulation of infamous slanders upon public men, their campaign speedily degenerated into one of personal vituperation, and they succeeded in earning the popular contempt more completely than partisan combatants ever did before.

When their peculiar method of political warfare had met its expected and proper reward, in overwhelming majorities against them at the polls, they lost the little sense they ever had, and began to insult the people as well as their leaders. Judging others by themselves, they cannot imagine the possibility of honesty in political action, and every vote against them, in their view, represents a bribe or a surrender to terrorism. Upon this idea SCHELL, ETHAN ALLEN and others based the diatribes they have inflicted upon the country. These men have not hesitated to brand the majority of their countrymen as sordid wretches, selling their votes for a mere pittance, or as frightened curs fawning at the feet of power, or basely submitting to the reversal of their decision at the ballot-box by the manipulations of ward politicians. Were these things true, the American people would be more infamous than any in history; but being, as they are, malignantly false, SCHELL, ALLEN & Co. are pilloried as common slanderers of their country before the world. There they will stand until the "avalanche" of November overtakes them, and they are buried forever by the votes of the people they have so wantonly outraged.

These men have destroyed themselves by their own madness. Without these "addresses" it would have been possible for the Republicans to imagine that their work was finished in October, and to fall into the dangers of over-confidence. This peril is now happily averted, for the reptile of Greeleyism has already given ample proof that he is only scotched, not killed. There can be, will be, no rest, no cessation of effort, until the going down of the sun on Nov. 5. It is but a little time for the Republicans all over the nation to give to their country, to the cause of peace, of good government. Let them give that time, and they will be rewarded with a triumph more decisive than has been achieved within the memory of living men by any party. Let our friends at once perfect their organizations by States, counties, townships and school districts everywhere, and let every Republican consider himself constantly on duty to encourage the steadfast and convert the doubtful. That insolent malignity of our foes which dares to indulge in the threat of physical resistance to the decision of the people at the ballot-box, must not be permitted to go unrebuked; that partisan scurrility which declares that the people have been bought or coerced must not go unpunished. To rebuke and punish both as they deserve, such a result should be attained in November as that the historians will search the records of the Electoral Colleges in vain to learn when HORACE GREELEY was a candidate for President. The American people can vindicate themselves against their traducers by securing this result, and their sense of self-respect demands that they omit nothing which will tend to aid in its attainment.

A Leaf From the Past.

An infamous morning journal, circulating only in the slums of the City, makes the return of Ex-Judge HILTON from Europe the occasion of saying that, during his administration in the Park Board, "the public were largely his debtors for much of which they know nothing." There could be no better authority than this vile sheet for such a statement. It was in its columns that there appeared, in September, 1871, an article inciting the Park laborers to burn and pillage the houses, whose numbers and situations were duly given, of certain gentlemen who had been prominent in the work of reform. The inspiration, if not the authorship, of that article was clearly traced to Ex-Judge HILTON, who was then Treasurer of the Department of Parks. On Sept. 29 appeared another article under the title of "A Warning Repeated," in which an editor of the TIMES and Mr. GEORGE C. BARRETT, now Judge of the Supreme Court, were pointed out as objects of vengeance to any of the Park laborers who might be ignorant or desperate enough to take the hint. This incendiary appeal proved as powerless as its predecessor to influence the class to whom it was addressed, who, to their lasting honor be it said, had a pretty clear perception in a crisis of unexampled difficulty of where to look for their true friends. That it so failed does not seem to have been the fault of SWEENY and HILTON, the rulers of the Park Board. Among the claims which were lately submitted to the Board of Audit is the following:

NEW-YORK, Dec. 26, 1871.
Department of Public Works.
To the New-York Star, Dr.

To advertising from Sept. 4 nineteen lines, three times, 30 cents	$17 10
Sept. 29, 1,000 copies Star	20 00
Total	$37 10

It might interest the public to hear from Ex-Judge HILTON what particular purpose of his Department was intended to be subserved by those one thousand copies of a blackguard newspaper containing an incitement to riot. Of course, the claim has not been paid; but there is a perfect certainty that, had the people, by their votes of last November, not terminated the Sweeny and Hilton régime, and its counterparts in other branches of local government, the claim, together with others equally infamous, would have been duly honored. We trust that the people of New-York are becoming quite awake to the fact that on their votes this Fall depends the question of whether their work of last November is to be entirely undone, or to be sustained and carried out to something like completeness.

Beneath the Furnace Blast.

The poets who praised Winter, and pictured in glowing rhyme the broad fire-place, with its brilliant flames, would find their occupation gone had a cruel fate held them on earth until the advent of the furnace and its pitiless pipes. During the sunny days of Summer, and the warm hours of early Fall, the furnace passed from our thoughts, and we enjoyed the sun-warmth, heedless that our houses were built over the furnace in the cellar, and that at no distant day the monster would awake from his Summer's repose, and breathe through all his hundred feet of winding tubes, hot, poisonous breath, scorching our lungs, and withering the strength of young and old. Now that the nights have grown cold and the days chilly, the furnace forces itself upon our thoughts, and we know that before many days are over, our regular Winter course of furnace-poisoning will begin.

The furnace is a remarkable instance of misdirected ingenuity. It is more costly than the open fire, for although the furnace-maker demonstrates that its use requires much less fuel than would be needed to produce the same amount of heat from an open grate, experience shows that no furnace, after it has once been set up in the house of the purchaser, ever meets the householder's expectations. Warranted to burn only one ton of coal per month, it celebrates its freedom from the restraints of the manufacturer's warerooms by prodigally insisting upon regular rations of two tons, and unless its insatiable demands are gratified, it refuses to give out any perceptible heat. The furnace, moreover, lacks the charm of the cheerful grate fire, and by its unseen mechanical method of procedure, helps to render one's daily life more prosaic and mechanical than it need be. These, however, are the least of its evils, and were the furnace the cheapest and cheeriest of house-warmers, it would still be unworthy of admission into any intelligent household.

For, in whatever shape its work is performed—whether in hot air, hot water, or steam—it is a subtle, ceaseless poisoner of the air. There is no draft in rooms heated by a "register," and whereas the chimney of an open grate carries foul air upward and outward, the furnace dries and bakes the changeless air until the last drop of moisture is drawn from it, while there are no means provided for the escape of carbonic acid gas. A house heated by a furnace is thus made a domestic upas-tree, and its atmosphere slowly, but surely, undermines the health of those who breathe it. Even the dumb furniture protests in its voiceless way against the poisonous effects of furnace heat, and shrivels and cracks under the blight that oppresses it. Add to the cost and cheerlessness of the furnace, the ruin of health and the wreck of furniture, and there can be little doubt that the immunity from dust and coal-scuttles, which is the sole benefit which it confers upon us, is dearly purchased.

But inasmuch as this merciless machine has fastened itself upon us so firmly that it is idle to hope to overthrow it, there might at least be some effort made to render it less deadly. Surely the ingenuity that inspired a High Church sexton of a suburban congregation to outwit his Low Church rector by sprinkling incense over the furnace pipes might avert to some extent the poisonous influence of the domestic furnace. Ventilators might be provided in connection with registers, which would create currents of air strong enough to remove poisonous gases, while the furnace itself might be so constructed as to give out ozone as well as heat. The monster may not be expelled from our households, but we ought to be able to tame its ferocity, and render it no longer an enemy of health.

The Revolution at Harvard.

A late number of the Russian Gazette de l'Académie announces that three hundred young ladies have proposed to enter themselves as students in the special courses of medicine and surgery, lately established for females by the Academy of Medicine. By the present regulations only seventy can be admitted; but the disappointed will have another chance next year. The announcement is a remarkable evidence of the rapid disappearance of one form of prejudice in an Empire where, it might be supposed, it would be strongest and most obstinately maintained. In truth, however, there is much more of what some call progress, and others dangerous innovation, in Russia than is commonly supposed; and the emancipation of the serfs has been followed by several social changes that would have been thought not only astounding, but impossible, twenty years ago. The world is assuredly taking a fresh departure in more senses than one; and when Russia encourages female doctors, Japan sends her young men to be trained in New-England schools, and an English historian steams over sea to submit a case between Great Britain and Ireland to the arbitration, as it were, of the American people, it becomes us to be prepared for the most unlikely conceivable things, and not to be astonished at any.

Few, indeed, will be astonished, or will have thought the proceeding improbable, who are told that the Board of Overseers of Harvard University have resolved hereafter to hold annual examinations of women, similar to those already held by some similar institutions abroad. The corporation submitted a scheme, and the overseers have just adopted it. There will be two classes of candidates, those under eighteen, and those above that age. It is understood that an association of Boston ladies are to bear the incidental expenses, in the same way that local associations do the same thing in England. Certificates to that effect are to be given to those who pass the examination, and "certificates of honor"—so discriminated—to those who pass "with credit." These documents, we take it, will be regarded as the equivalent of diplomas; and, of course, will prove of great service to ladies who are fitting themselves to become teachers. The system may also naturally be expected to raise the standard of scholarship in girls' schools, and thus afford a highly desirable elevating tendency in general to female education. We learn that the first examinations will be held next June, and, as soon as practicable, the authorities of Harvard will publish a schedule of particulars. This will include the objects to be taken up, the books to be consulted, the degree of proficiency required to pass, and that essential to pass "with honor." In the meantime, useful hints may be had by looking into the examination papers and reports of the University of Cambridge, in England, which, it is stated, will form the basis of the system to be adopted at Harvard, and some account of which was published in our columns a short time ago.

Complaints of the disability now to be removed have been in some quarters loud and urgent, and the fruits of the concession made at the principal American university will be waited for with lively interest. Whether our fair young students will be disposed to submit to the loftier and severer tests of scholarship, by which they will henceforward have the privilege of measuring their attainments, and to what extent they will show that disposition, are questions that of course remain to be tested. For our own part, we have not the least doubt that the results will be what Americans may be proud of; and we believe that other collegiate institutions of repute in various parts of the country will follow an example likely to be productive of so much good. The fact that the authorities at Cambridge thought proper to wait until they could judge of the results of the similar experiment made at their sister city in England, speaks well for their prudence. Our readers may recall that, begun in 1868, the system of examination, as extended to women at the English University, was only made permanent after three years' trial. As soon thereafter as practicable, the system is now to be adopted at Harvard. Nor need we be ashamed of coming second in the innovation, when, in so many cognate ones, we have been an easy first. Moreover, if the American University will have flourished for two hundred and thirty-seven years, while extending its privileges to men alone, we must not forget that the venerable seat of learning on the banks of the Cam beats us in the tenure of exclusiveness by as long a space as divides the time of JOHN HARVARD from that of SIEGEBERT, King of the East Angles.

MINOR TOPICS.

The result of the investigations into the loss of the Metis and the explosion on the Dean Richmond have been made public. The loss of the Metis having clearly been due to the negligence of the master, and the first and second pilots, the licenses of those officers are revoked. This is simply trifling. Either these men were guilty or guiltless of the death of scores of men and women. If guiltless, they deserved no penalty. If guilty, the mere revocation of their licenses is a punishment utterly inadequate to their offense. In the case of the Dean Richmond, a more intelligent decision has been made. The boilers are declared to be unsafe at high pressure, and the engineers are forbidden to carry more than twenty pounds of steam. No one who reads this report will trust himself on board this steamer until it is furnished with new boilers, and the owners will, therefore, be compelled to change its boilers before next season.

A California jury having acquitted Mrs. LAURA FAIR, it was supposed that she would henceforth be at liberty to resume her former habits of regarding the male Californian as a legitimate beast of prey. It seems, however, that there is some little doubt as to her future prosperity. A son of her victim, Mr. CRITTENDEN, has announced his purpose of shooting her "on sight"—to use the dialect of San Francisco—and has already pursued her on the public highway with an avenging revolver. So far she has escaped, but it must be remembered that when the Californian publicly proclaims his purpose of shooting an enemy on sight, he is usually prevented from accomplishing his design only by the superior skill in pistol-practice of his intended victim. Mrs. FAIR will either have to fly from California, or she must gird on her revolver, and wait on convenient corners for young CRITTENDEN, and shoot him before he can draw his pistol.

MAHMOUD PASHA who, a few months ago, was deposed from his office of Grand Vizier for malversation and other very serious offenses, is now undergoing examination at the hands of the Council of Ministers. He paid no attention, however, to its summons, and it was not until a special order emanated from the Sultan that he condescended to attend. It created some surprise that he proceeded to his examination at Stamboul in a steamer specially appropriated to the service of the Cabinet, and in company with the very men who were presently to sit in judgment on him. These and similar circumstances create an impression that his Imperial Majesty has a speaking kindness for him, which may render the proceedings now taking place something of a farce. In this case, the Constantinople correspondent of the Independence Belge states, that the present Ministry, which is honestly bent on reform, will infallibly resign, and the Sultan will find himself in an awkward position. Evasion and prevarication have hitherto been the main features of the Ex-Vizier's answers.

It is the custom of the Central African person to charge all deaths to the unfaithfulness or perverseness of the "rain-maker" of his village. Wherefore it frequently happens that when the rain-maker has been applied to in vain for a substantial shower, public indignation finds expression in stones and clubs, or even sacrifices the rain-maker at the stake. If the Central African believes that his rain-maker is a veritable cloud-compeller, the French peasant also believes that his curé has the power to put a stop to thunder-storms, and when the latter refuses to exercise this power, he is treated much after the fashion of the obstinate rain-maker. The other day a violent storm occurred in the Province of Berri, and the village curé, instead of taking a few first-class relics and going promptly forth to put a stop to the thing, remained within the church and kept himself dry. Whereupon the peasants paid him a visit, and not only beat him severely, but smashed the saints, who, in the security of their niches, had imitated the curé and preferred idle dryness to the moist fulfillment of their duty.

The Cologne Gazette says that the death of Count JOSEPH MASTAI FERRETTI has sent His Holiness into the deepest seclusion, the latter having severely felt his brother's death, although there had been something of estrangement between them on account of their differences on political points. Most of the members of the MASTAI family have been conspicuous for their uprightness and inclination toward Liberalism, and it was certainly the case that in the earlier part of his reign the Pope himself showed unmistakable tendencies in the same wholesome direction. On his return from Gaeta, when, leaning on the support of France, he adopted a reactionary policy, his own family became so opposed to it that they actually quitted their native property of Sinigaglia until it had become included in the new kingdom of Italy! The Count just deceased lived, forgotten and solitary, on his small patrimony. His dislike to priests was a matter of notoriety, and just as Mrs. Mahomet declined to believe in her husband's infallibility, so did Count JOSEPH resolutely refuse to recognize that of his brother. The MASTAI date their origin from a Venetian manufacturer, who, during the sixteenth century, settled in the Marches of Ancona and acquired a fortune there, which his descendants increased by an alliance with the powerful family of FERRETTI.

A congress of vine-growers has been held this Autumn in the south of France, whose members, before separating, tried a most interesting experiment. This is a plan to counteract the destructive effects of frost—which, at certain critical periods, is fatal to their crops—by the creation of clouds of warm smoke, which shall hover over the ground. Iron vessels, containing a preparation principally of tar, having been disposed at intervals over the vineyards, were set fire to, and produced thick clouds, which hovered over the land and spread for miles around. An important point in the plan is its cheapness.

A retired French tradesman was lately much disgusted at finding various valuable personal articles mysteriously absent from their proper places. Residing with him was an old servant, who had lived in the house thirty years, and a nephew. It was impossible for him to suspect either, and yet there was not the slightest ground for supposing that the robberies had been effected by any one outside the house. He resolved to watch. To his consternation he observed, one or two nights after, the nephew, in his night-dress, descend, take various valuable articles, and proceed with them to a Summer-house in the garden. On his return the uncle confronted him, being duly prepared, we may suppose, for "a scene." He was disappointed. The nephew appeared utterly unconscious of his affectionate relative's presence, and passed quietly upstairs to his room. Next day the uncle taxed him with his extraordinary conduct. The nephew denied all knowledge of it. The Summer-house was searched, and in a cellar beneath it all the missing articles were found. It is bad enough to have either a somnambulist or a kleptomaniac in a family, but the two combined is really a trial which we trust, for poor humanity's sake, will remain rare.

THE WASHINGTON TREATY.

American Diplomacy Vindicated—The Great Results Achieved at Geneva.

Nothing in President Grant's Administration has provoked more abuse and unjust criticism, from the opposition Press, than his course with regard to the "indirect claims" growing out of the Alabama depredations. Had a tithe of what was alleged against him been true, he would have deserved the contempt of honorable men. He was accused of small diplomatic chicanery, of disgraceful blundering, of playing the part of a bully and a poltroon, of attempting first to trick or browbeat the British Government into allowing the claims, and then abjectly consenting to withdraw them from our "case." The pitiable spectacle of the once proud American Eagle trailing its feathers in the dust before the British Lion was daily paraded before our eyes. The grief of Democratic and Liberal editors and stump orators over the humiliation of the bird of freedom was really touching. Their jeremiads on the decay of American prestige and statesmanship were enough to melt hearts of stone. Even old Gen. Jackson was called out of his grave to rebuke his renegade successor, and to assure the American people that he would never have permitted the starry banner to be trailed in the dust.

That the misrepresentations and calumnies of the opposition failed of their intended effect, was due to the strong faith of the American people in President Grant. It did not stand to reason that the man who had saved the country on the field of battle should betray it in that of diplomacy, or that the hero of the most stubbornly fought campaign in history should play the rôle of a sneak and bully in civil affairs, and the people had full faith that neither the country nor the President had anything to regret in his course. This, they believed, would be the verdict of impartial history.

Their confidence has been fully justified. We have now before us, in Harper's Magazine for November, an admirable résumé of the whole matter from the earliest suggestion of a Joint High Commission to the time of the disposition of the indirect claims by the Court of Arbitration. The paper, which, we understand, emanates from the most trustworthy source, sets at rest forever every calumny raised against the Administration in connection with the conduct of the Alabama negotiations, and vindicates, in the most satisfactory manner, the course pursued by the President and his advisers. We desire to call attention to some of the points developed in this important contribution to history:

The opposition Press, following the lead of the English, accused the Administration of attempting to trick the English Commissioners into the belief that the "indirect claims" would be excluded from the treaty, and afterward, in violation of good faith, making them a part of the American case. The charge is utterly without foundation. Not only was there no understanding of the sort, but the record shows that the English Press, for weeks after the "American case" was public property, admitted that the treaty at least permitted the claims to be presented. On the 29th of December, of last year, the London Times published a synopsis of the American case, and on the 2d of January made it the basis of a leading article, in which it stated quite fairly the classification and character of the claims presented and the object of the case, saying: "All these large and, we may say, boundless questions may be considered as before the Arbitrators of Geneva." On the 3d of January the London Daily News discussed the subject in a similar spirit, concluding with these words:

> "Happily, claims such as these are no longer matter of controversy between England and the United States. Confident in our own rectitude, and in the substantial justice of our cause, we have consented to refer it to a Tribunal so constituted as to secure the confidence of the world."

As late as the 29th of January the Times said:

> "What shall we do? Our first duty, both to the United States and to ourselves, is to demur to the consideration of the claim for indirect damages put forward in the case submitted by them, and to crave a decision upon our protest by the Tribunal of Arbitration."

But the "British case" itself affords conclusive evidence that the indirect claims were regarded as legitimately within the scope of the treaty. These claims were set forth in Chapter VI. of the American case, and were classified as follows:

1. The claim for direct losses growing out of the destruction of vessels and their cargoes by the insurgent cruisers.
2. The national expenditures in the pursuit of those cruisers.
3. The loss in the transfer of the American commercial marine to the British flag.
4. The enhanced payment of insurance.
5. The prolongation of the war and the addition of a large sum to the cost of the war and the suppression of the rebellion.

It was argued that in satisfaction of these claims "the Tribunal should award a sum, in gross, to the United States." The British case declares that the > "Claims which are referred to the Tribunal are 'claims growing out of the acts of' 'certain vessels in respect of which the' Government of the United States alleges that Great Britain has failed to fulfill some international duty.' * * * As to each vessel separately, the Tribunal is to determine whether there has or has not been any failure of duty on the part of Her Majesty's Government. If, in the judgment of the Tribunal, there has been such a failure in respect of any specified vessel or vessels, the Tribunal may adopt, at its discretion, either of two courses. It may, on the one hand, award such a gross sum as the Arbitrators may deem just to be paid by Great Britain, in full satisfaction of all well-founded claims on the part of the United States, growing out of the acts of the vessel or vessels in respect of which there has been a failure of duty; or the claims on account of each vessel might be referred separately to a Board of Assessors. * * * The phrase, 'the Alabama claims,' is understood by Her Britannic Majesty's Government to embrace all claims 'growing' (to use the language of the treaty) 'out of acts committed by' this vessel, and by other vessels which are alleged to have been procured, like the Alabama, from British ports during the war, and under circumstances more or less similar, and to be confined to such claims."

It would be difficult, says the writer in Harper's, to state more clearly or more broadly the American view; it is difficult to see how the five classes of claims enumerated in the American case are excluded from the official British statement. The language of the two cases is perfectly in accord; they indicate the same meaning, cover the same classes of cases, and if no other papers had been put in, the Arbitrators might, with propriety, have proceeded to adjudicate upon all the five classes of claims then laid before them. It was not until the Pall Mall Gazette, the Saturday Review, and one or two other journals, which had always bitterly opposed the treaty, raised an uproar against the claims, that the offensive and unfounded insinuation, not exactly amounting to a charge, was made of an absolute agreement between the plenipotentiaries that the indirect claims should not be presented.

One calumny is thus effectually disposed of. But the Administration was also charged with putting forth preposterous claims, in the expectation of having them allowed by the Tribunal, and then ignominiously backing down before the firm attitude of England. But the Secretary of State, in an able paper dated the 27th of April, 1872, expressly declared that the United States had never expected or desired any unreasonable pecuniary compensation on account of the indirect claims, and had "never entertained the visionary thought of such an extravagant measure of damages as finds expression in the excited language of the British Press, and seems most unaccountably to have taken possession of the minds of some even of the statesmen of Great Britain." The grand object of the United States in presenting these claims was the establishment of a rule to be the law or contract between both countries in the future, "declaring that neither of them shall demand compensation from the other, for remote or indirect losses arising out of, or being the result of, failure in the observance of neutral obligations." But it did not suit the English Government to accept this view of the case. Such a declaration was just what they least desired. England wanted security for herself with regard to past claims, but not for the United States in case of another war. To prevent the authoritative declaration of the principle for which the United States contended, the British Government endeavored to secure the indefinite adjournment of the Tribunal, suggested several vital modifications to the treaty, and even hinted (too mild a word) at a possible withdrawal from the Arbitration. All through this phase of the negotiations England appears in the character of an alarmed and irresolute yet blustering litigant, while the United States calmly and steadfastly stood its ground, and firmly refused to withdraw the claims or submit to any modification of the treaty which would leave this vital question of the liability of neutrals to indirect or consequential damages undecided.

At this critical juncture the matter was settled by the declaration of the Tribunal that the indirect claims

> "Do not constitute, upon the principles of international law applicable to such cases, good foundation for an award of compensation or computation of damages between nations, and should upon such principles be wholly excluded from the consideration of the Tribunal in making its award, even if there were no disagreement between the two Governments as to the competency of the Tribunal to decide thereon."

President Grant immediately accepted the "Declaration of the Tribunal as its judgment upon a question of public law, which he had felt that the interests of both Governments required should be decided, and for the determination of which he had felt it important to present the claims referred to for the purpose of taking the opinion of the Tribunal."

The British also formally announced that they "found nothing in the communication of the Arbitrators * * * to which they could not assent."

Thus the great object for which the American Government had all along contended was attained. A decision by the Court of Arbitration of the point at issue was secured. The additional advantage was also gained that the United States would be able to fall back upon this decision (as well as upon the arguments of the British Government) if ever the latter should present indirect or consequential claims. Even the Fenian claims, which the British Government had repeatedly described as consequential, were now forever barred. As Minister Schenck wrote, a full month before the declaration was made:

> "With our chances of being generally neutral when Great Britain and other European States are belligerent, the benefits of the rule are to be principally and oftenest ours. Our continental position, our extended sea-coast, our numerous ports, the enterprising character of our citizens, and the difficulty of restraining their spirit of adventure, surely make the rule, that would thus be established, more valuable and more favorable to the United States than to perhaps any other country."

The United States thus secured at Geneva one of the most important diplomatic triumphs of modern times. Throughout the whole of these trying and difficult negotiations, its attitude was dignified, consistent and firm. There was, on its side, no wavering, no "backing down," no surrender of principles. From the first, one object was kept steadily in view, and that object was attained. The history of the negotiations shows that the aims of the President and his advisers were justifiable, patriotic, worthy of themselves and their country, and entirely within the scope of the treaty. To President Grant, Secretary Fish, Minister Schenck and the eminent men who represent the United States at Geneva, the world is indebted for the final settlement of a question involving the vital interests of every maritime nation on the globe.

NOTES TO THE EDITOR.

The Market Bank.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Most of the unfortunate depositors of the Market Savings Bank think it would be in order for the assignee to give an account of his stewardship, and also to state what has been done, if anything, toward bringing Van Name and his friends to justice. Some months ago it was stated, both by the assignee and the Depositors' Investigation Committee, that legal action would be taken against the thieving trustees and managers, as also against Heiser Sons, to recover the amount of their indebtedness, and it was further stated that Gov. Hoffman had promised his assistance to forward the good work; but the depositors are wholly ignorant as to the action of their representatives. If anything has been done the depositors would like to know it. Some of the former charge the members of the Investigation Committee with having compromised with Van Name, receiving the full amount of their deposits on condition of their relinquishing all suits against the bank. Though I place no faith in these rumors, an explanation on this point would be in order.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. A DEPOSITOR.

Another Greeleyite Slander Disposed of—Letter from Hon. Glenni W. Scofield.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I do not believe the character of Gen. Grant needs any vindication at my hands, but I emphatically protest against my name being used in the interest of his defamers.

A disparaging remark, reflecting upon the personal habits of the President, has been attributed to me, and extensively circulated of late in Democratic newspapers. It is published, I understand, on the authority of the Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial.

Nothing I have ever seen in my relations with President Grant would have justified such a remark. Nothing I have ever uttered could, by the most ingenious malice, be tortured into any such disrespectful language.

The story is a malicious fabrication, and may be classed with the other calumnies that have disgraced the conduct of this campaign.

Very truly yours,
G. W. SCOFIELD.

WARREN, Penn., Wednesday, Oct. 16, 1872.

The District-Attorneyship—Note from Mr. Algernon S. Sullivan.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In some of today's papers it is stated that many friends are pressing my name as an available nomination for the office of District-Attorney. I am grateful indeed for these continued expressions of public favor, but I trust I will be pardoned for again saying publicly I do not covet office, and I must decline any candidacy. No man in our City shall go further than I in the efforts now being made to establish a pure and honest Government. I have very positive party convictions and sympathies as a Democrat, but in this matter, if need be, I will put partisanship under my feet. My immediate purpose is to help secure a stainless, high-toned organization for the Democracy, but I will fight all other honest reform organizations with none other than the most generous weapons. Let us all, as public-spirited citizens, work with an eye single to the public good, and our party contests will have a savor palatable to the best citizens. I will not cripple my little influence by any appearance of selfish office seeking.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
ALGERNON S. SULLIVAN.

HOW GEORGIA WAS STOLEN.

Colored Republicans Forced to Vote the Democratic Ticket Under the Knife and Pistol—Nullification of the Fifteenth Amendment.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 17.—It is not probable that more than one-third of the Republican vote will be polled in this State at the election on the 5th of November. The frauds and outrages perpetrated upon the negroes at the election on the 22 inst. have completely demoralized and disheartened them.

In Merriweather County, white Democrats, with drawn knives, marched the negroes up to the polls and commanded them to vote the tickets provided for them, threatening to "cut their hearts out" unless they did so.

In Muscogee County, negroes were marched up to the polls by the Democrats with drawn pistols, and forced to cast their ballots for the Democrats. The same is true of a number of other counties. Republicans in many sections dare not vote other than the Democratic ticket.

In counties where violence was not resorted to it was because a system of challenges and delays and ballot-box stuffing accomplished the purpose sought.

In Conata County, for instance, every colored voter was challenged, and it permitted to vote at all could not do so under fifteen or twenty minutes to each voter. On the opposite side of the room, where the white men voted, no one was challenged or delayed in depositing ballots.

The Republicans, however, notwithstanding the reign of terror which prevails in many sections of the State, and the demoralized condition of the party in consequence of a settled determination on part of the Democratic officials to prevent a fair election, have decided to make the best showing possible on the 5th of November. They make the issue squarely whether the Fifteenth Amendment and the laws of Congress shall be nullified by the Democracy of Georgia, and call upon the world to witness the result.

CONNECTICUT.

Nomination of Gen. Hawley for Congress in the First District—His Address of Acceptance.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 17.—At the Convention of the Republicans of the First Congressional District today, Gen. J. R. Hawley was unanimously nominated for Congress, to fill the unexpired term of Hon. Julius L. Strong, deceased. On the first ballot Gen. Hawley received the entire 94 votes. He was introduced to the Convention, and addressed it, accepting the nomination, and briefly discussed the national questions at issue between the two parties. He expressed his appreciation of the unanimity of his nomination, and the spirit in which it was tendered. He considered his acceptance in the light of a duty. He paid a touching tribute to Mr. Strong, who had long been his personal friend, and on whose public and private character there was no stain.

Gen. Hawley was received in the Convention with great enthusiasm. At the close of the Convention three cheers were given for Gen. Hawley, and three more for President Grant.

The Democrats have nominated Hon. W. W. Eaton, a positive Democrat.

VERMONT.

Campaign in the Second Congressional District—Poland Versus Steele.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—A private letter from Caledonia County, Vermont, says: "The contest in this Congressional District is waxing warm. Democrats and Greeley men go into the Republican caucuses wherever they can, and vote for Steele delegates. It is the most disgraceful muddle imaginable. They stand for no ceremony. Anything to defeat Poland." The letter gives no opinion as to which will win. A gentleman here familiar with Vermont politics says of the contest that Poland and Steele are both Grant men and both engaged actively in the canvass for the Republican State ticket in Vermont before the recent election. Judge Steele is a young man of marked ability, who graduated at Dartmouth College shortly before the war, taking the highest honors. He at once took a high position in his profession of law, and was made a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State, to succeed Judge Poland when the latter was first sent to Congress. Judge Poland's friends say that it was his indorsement and influence that secured Steele's election as Judge, but this the friends of the latter dispute. It was understood all around that when Judge Poland left Congress he would use his influence in favor of Steele as his successor, but it seems the latter became tired of waiting, and perhaps feared that a delay of two years more would develop more formidable competitors for the place. Any way he has made the contest now, and Poland's friends claim in violation of friendship and good faith. It had become very warm even before the State election, and all the accounts represent that it has assumed a violent personal aspect, very unpleasant and much to be regretted, as both contestants are able, honorable men, and were so esteemed throughout the State of Vermont till each came to have the enemies bred by the political conflict.

NEW-JERSEY.

Senator Frelinghuysen at Plainfield—Large Republican Meeting.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Oct. 17.—Hon. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen addressed a meeting of the Republicans of Plainfield this evening. The meeting was the largest and most enthusiastic ever held here. John Taylor Johnston was chosen President. The Republicans are active, and will give a good account of themselves in November.

NEW-YORK.

Representative Cox Addresses a Small and Restive "Sorehead" Meeting—The Standers Reunited by Him Pronounced "Too Thin."

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Oct. 17.—No candid person who attended the ridiculous "Liberal" fizzle of to-night, can for a moment doubt that the backbone of Greeleyism in this vicinity is hopelessly broken, and the audience which greeted Mr. Cox was but too significant of the utter demoralization which has overtaken our enemy. Including the large number of Republicans drawn from curiosity, Doolittle Hall was scarcely two-thirds full, while scores of Mr. Cox's auditors, largely dyed-in-the-wool-Democrats at that, expressed their disapprobation of the speaker's manifest want of heart in his work by shuffling noisily out in the midst of his address. It was evident from the first that the speaker was laboring against the tide, and under the shadow of the untoward events looming disagreeably up in November. Ejaculations of disappointment were heard on all sides, that Tammanyra own pet orator should be able to marshal no more terrible array of charges than the stale, puerile, oft-exploded slanders of Dana & Co.—slanders so dangerous to the unprincipled inventors as to have already eaten the vest life out of the abortive reform movement. It is but moderation to say that Mr. Cox resorted to deliberate misrepresentation, but the seed will drop in unfruitful ground, which fact the speaker evidently realized from his abrupt close. One fact was conspicuous, the men in the community whom the Democracy heretofore boasted as belonging to the party, were absent from the meeting and the platform. Unfortunately for the doomed alliance, these men long since deserted the water-logged Greeley craft.

Mass-meeting in Utica—Senator Conkling and Secretary Robeson Speak—Great Enthusiasm.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 17.—The largest mass-meeting ever held in Oneida County was held at Utica this evening. It was preceded by a torch-light procession and a calvary parade, which was one mile in length, with 2,000 torches in line. It was larger than any procession even in the old Fremont and Lincoln, slavery and war times. Two monster meetings were held in the two largest halls in the city. One meeting in the Opera-house was addressed by Senator Conkling and Secretary Robeson. Mr. Conkling received a welcome warmer than was ever extended to an orator in this city before. He spoke two hours.

The Mechanics' Hall meeting was addressed by Hon. Ellis H. Roberts for an hour, in one of his most brilliant efforts. He predicted 40,000 majority for Dix. Judge Wm. J. Bacon, Alfred S. Cox, J. N. Doel and many others addressed the meeting, which was so full of enthusiasm that it was almost impossible to persuade it to adjourn. The city during the evening was ablaze with fire-works, flags and bonfires. The turn-out has frightened the demoralized enemy, and they concede 2,000 Republican majority in staunch old Oneida.

Republican Demonstration at Hudson—Gen. Robinson Has an Enthusiastic Reception.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HUDSON, N. Y., Oct. 17.—The Republicans of Hudson assembled in large numbers at the City Hall this evening, in response to a call for a mass-meeting. The audience room was densely packed, and the greatest enthusiasm was manifested.

Gen. John C. Robinson, the Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, was announced to be present. When he entered the hall the whole audience arose and greeted him with cheers, and loud demonstrations on his appearance on the platform were again renewed. His reception was a perfect ovation. The meeting organized with John C. Hogeboom, Esq., of this city, as Chairman.

Gen. Robinson delivered a short but effective speech, which was received with loud demonstrations of approval. His allusions to the State ticket elicited loud and continued cheering. Hon. A. W. Tenney followed with an able and eloquent address of two hours' duration. The demonstration was one of the finest held during the campaign, and is indicative of the confidence pervading the Republican ranks.

A CLERICAL SCANDAL.

Investigation in the Case of Rev. Henry Matthews by the Newcastle, Md., Presbytery—The Accused Exonerated.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 17.—A parallel to the celebrated Huston case is agitating the community. Four weeks ago a mulatto girl attempted to abandon her illegitimate infant at North East, Cecil County, and on her arrest she charged Rev. Henry Matthews, a Presbyterian clergyman, with the paternity of the child. The minister in whose family she had lived about two years had been a resident of Elkton, but a short time ago he unaccountably gave up his pastorate and moved to a smaller town in Baltimore County. To give color to the girl's assertions, it was discovered that he brought her to this city just before her confinement, and, she avers, provided her with a small sum of money. Rev. Mr. Matthews denied the charge, and endeavored to have the editor of the Cecil Whig, who had taken the girl's side, indicted for libel, but the Grand Jury refused to take action, and likewise ignored the charge of abandonment against the girl. The matter thus rested until last night, when it was taken up by the New Castle Presbytery of the Baltimore Synod, and that body following precedent, exonerated the accused. Feeling is running high in Elkton, his former residence, and the prevailing expression is, that Rev. Henry Matthews has been "whitewashed" by the Presbytery.

AMUSEMENTS.

Amateur Theatricals at the Union League Theatre.

An excellent entertainment is promised for Saturday evening next at the Union League Theatre. The favorite comedy of "The Ladies' Battle" will be acted by Mrs. R. W. Nathan and her associates in one of the best and most distinguished of our amateur dramatic companies. Those who remember Mrs. Nathan's brilliant success in this comedy a year ago, at the same place, need only to be reminded of this opportunity to enjoy her performance again. The bill also includes interesting musical selections, to be rendered by competent amateurs, and several professional instrumental soloists, in addition to the Groux children—a pair of infant musical prodigies. The entertainment is given under the auspices of Beacon Light Lodge, F. and A. M., and the excellence of its object should strongly aid the attractions of the performance in assembling a full and intelligent audience.

Announcements for this Evening.

"Fra Diavolo" is to be given at the Academy of Music, this evening, with Mlle. Lucca as Zerlina....At the Olympic Theatre, Mme. Aimée will sing in "La Grande Duchesse" for the first time this season....Mr. Froude will tonight deliver the second lecture of his series at Association Hall.

The Corrupt State Combination.

From the Albany Evening Journal.

The crushing defeat of Mr. Greeley is now happily assured. But the defeat of the Greeley State ticket in New-York is only second in importance, and to that result, clearly within our grasp, every energy must now be directed. As the election of Mr. Greeley would be fraught with the greatest calamities to the nation, so the success of the Kernan-Depew combination would be incalculably disastrous to all the best interests of the State. Look at some of the reasons which imperatively demand the overthrow of this unholy coalition.

I. It is the ticket of the corruptionists. There is nothing in it or about it which looks to reform, Mr. Kernan has never fought in the reform battle. He was a member of the Democratic State Convention last year. After the Tammany Ring had carried the Convention and renominated the Tammany ticket, he never lifted his voice in protest, but yielded his cordial support. We challenge the production of a single act on his part which served to encourage or strengthen the cause of reform. On the other hand, he stands today the chosen candidate of the Tammany Democrats and the Tammany Republicans—the two poisoned fountains of corruption in City and State affairs. These are the elements behind him and the influences that would control him. His associate, Mr. Depew, is a known corruptionist, a prince of the lobby. His peculiar work about the Legislature is a matter of public history. To associate him with the idea of reform would be mockery, as to transfer him from the lobby to the Lieutenant-Governor's chair would be a disgrace.

II. It is the ticket of the plunderers in State administrations. Mr. Kernan and his associates represent that Democratic Party whose recent rule in this State is baleefully signalized by an onerous deficiency debt of seven millions, crowning a career of unprecedented extravagance. That enormous burden stands as a sign and warning of what Democratic administration is. While it hangs over them it would be suicidal madness for the people to try the experiment again. A Democratic Legislature makes prodigious appropriations, and refuses to levy the taxes which must furnish the means; Democratic State officers recklessly and unlawfully pay out when they have not the money in the Treasury; borrowing to make up the amount; a debt of nearly seven millions is piled up at the price of two years' profligacy; and then the people are asked to try Democratic administration again! Are they infatuated?

III. The success of this coalition would menace the integrity of the common school system. There is a party, long, persistent, unscrupulous in our schools. We have seen and felt it for years. We know that it is not abandoned. Every intelligent man understands it and whence it comes. It matters not whether Mr. Kernan is himself inimical to the common schools or not—the pregnant fact which confronts us is that his election would unmistakably encourage those who are. In the Constitutional Convention he argued that every child should have a religious education. He took the ground that every institution of charity was necessarily sectarian in character. He contended that State aid should either be given to none or else to all. Add the single link that the principle which he would make applicable to these institutions should be made applicable to those other institutions in which he thinks a religious education should be taught, and you have the entire chain of argument presented by those who would undermine the school system. They urge that every child should have a religious education; that our schools are necessarily sectarian; that the school fund should be divided or withheld altogether. How narrow the margin of difference! Do the people wish to give a new impulse to that crusade?

IV. The election of this ticket would be New-York's indorsement of disloyal sentiments and reactionary purposes. Mr. Kernan's course during the war is well understood. The Tribune, when the Tribune itself was true, pronounced him an "envenomed copperhead." He deserved the name. Elected to Congress upon a pledge of supporting the Government, he acted with the worst disloyalists in thwarting and resisting its measures for the preservation of the Union. He has been in full sympathy with the whole spirit and record of the Democratic Party. Mr. Cox, his associate upon the ticket for Congressman at large, has recently given conspicuous proof of his reactionary and revolutionary sentiment. As a member of the minority of the Kuklux Committee, he last Winter signed a report declaring that the "unnatural state of things" by which the negro enjoys position in the administration of public affairs, must come to an end, and distinctly asserting that the triumph of just such a coalition as that of which he is now a candidate, would be "the political death of the negro on this continent." Shall New-York indorse such men as Kernan, and Cox, and Cox?

We have no doubt that this ticket is doomed to defeat. We firmly believe that New-York will be carried for Dix, and Robinson, and Tremain, and the whole State ticket as well as for Grant. But we must make assurance doubly sure. We must not regard the victory as won until we have its brilliant trophies in our possession. We must not merely defeat the enemy—we must make it a rout.

Binghamton,

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The legal sale of the block of thirty-eight lots, bounded by Second and Third avenues, One Hundred and First and One Hundred and Second streets, expected to occur yesterday (Thursday, Oct. 17) at the Exchange, was again adjourned by the auctioneers, Winans, Sands & Garretteon, until Thursday of next week. Nothing else worthy of note transpired, and business generally was exceedingly dull. In regard to the suburban auctions held yesterday, reports will be made to-morrow. Today, at the Exchange, the principal sale proposed is one in charge of E. H. Ludlow & Co., who, by order of trustees, will dispose of four valuable four-story brown-stone houses and lots, known as Nos. 318, 320, 322 and 324 West Fifty-eighth-street, situated on the south side of the street, 325 feet west of Eighth-avenue—an important tran saction, and such as should attract attention. In addition, at a legal auction, Joseph McGuire is advertised to sell a house and lot in Mitchell-place, (East Forty-ninth-street,) 108 feet east of First-avenue. Today, also, at Mamaroneck, Westchester County, on the ground, at 1 o'clock, (sale heretofore unannounced,) Wm. D. Palmer will offer at auction three new houses and a large number of lots, located on the first and second subdivision of the Grand Park property, within five minutes' walk of the New-York and New-Haven Railroad station.

The suburban auction held at Richmond Hill, Long Island, on Wednesday, Oct. 16, by Jere. Johnson, Jr., was a fair success, 107 lots being disposed of for $25,470, an average of nearly $250 per lot. Particulars will be found below in the report appended. The attendance was very good, but many were prevented from bidding owing to the stringent restrictions placed upon the lots by the owners of the property. These were as follows:

"And the party of the second part, for himself and his heirs and assigns, doth hereby covenant to and with the parties or the first part, and each of them, as well for their own use as for the use of each and all the persons who may purchase or derive title through or from them to any part of the tracts of land laid down on the aforesaid map, that neither the party of the second part, nor his heirs or assigns, shall or will at any time hereafter erect or permit upon any part of the land conveyed by the present indenture any slaughter-house, smith-shop, forge, furnace, steam-engine, brass-foundry, nail or other iron-foundry, or any manufactory of gunpowder, glue, varnish, vitriol, ink or carpentane, or for the tanning, dressing, or preparing hides, skins or leather, or any ale-house, brewery, distillery, or other place for the manufacture or compounding of intoxicating liquors, or for selling or dispensing the same in any form, or for carrying on any other noxious, dangerous, or offensive trade or business, or any building of the character or description known as a tenement-house, and that he or they will not erect on said premises, nor permit to be erected thereon, any dwelling nearer than twenty feet to the line of any street, road or park nor without written consent, any barn, stable, or other out-house nearer than forty feet to the line of any street, road or park, laid out or which may be laid out, upon the property embraced in said map; and further, that the present covenants on the part of said party of the second part, shall run with the land intended to be affected thereby, and shall enure to the benefit of the parties of the first part, and each of them, and of their grantees who may at any time own any of the land laid down on said map, and may be enforced by any of them by action, injunction, or otherwise."

Had these restrictions been less binding a larger number of lots would have been sold and better prices realized. None of the dwellings advertised for sale were disposed of. The sale of the Dix property at North Mannersing Island, Rye, Westchester County, on Wednesday, by R. R. Hazard, Jr., did not take place, but was again adjourned, this time indefinitely; and it is not proobable that the place will be again offered until next Spring. In reference to the executor's sale at Liberty Corner, N. J., on Tuesday, at which the King estate was offered, no report has up to this date been received.

At private sale, E. H. Ludlow & Co., No. 3 Pine-street, report having recently sold the four-story brown-stone front house and lot No. 219 West Nineteenth-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, (25 by 65 by 120,) for $35,000.

EXTENSION RAILWAY

First Mortgage 7 Per Cent. Convertible

GOLD BONDS,

AT 90 AND INTEREST,

Issued by the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railway to aid in building its EXTENSION line West, in a direct line from Champaign (185 miles) to the Mississippi River at Keokuk, and a branch from White Heath (32 miles) to Decatur, all in the State of Illinois. The bonds are secured by a first and only mortgage on the EXTENSION, now being rapidly constructed in the most thorough manner by able and experienced contractors who represent a capital of several millions of dollars, which insures the last rail being laid at an early date. About 60 miles are already finished and 110 miles graded; the whole line, 217 miles, will be completed early in 1873. We have been connected and entirely familiar with the I. B. & W. Railway from its early organization. It was completed in the Autumn of 1870, and has developed rapidly into a SUCCESSFUL AND WEALTHY CORPORATION, having a large revenue from its largely increasing business. With the EXTENSION it will be one corporation, with 420 miles of road, located in a commanding position in the heart of the best portion of the country. The counties on the line of the EXTENSION in 1870 had a population of 942,330; valuation of real and personal estate, $181,000,000; bushels of grain raised, 27,000,000; value of farm products, $25,570,000, and live stock, $18,349,000; to which may safely be added 15 per cent. to represent the present population and value. THE COUNTIES ON THE OLD LINE AND THE EXTENSION TOGETHER CONTAIN A POPULATION OF NEARLY THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILLION, AND A PROPERTY VALUATION EXCEEDING $400,000,000.

From these statistics it will be readily seen that the EXTENSION will have a Local Business that will make it a complete success. In addition to this it will have the entire Through Traffic of the Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska Road, connecting with it on the Mississippi River, and extending West to the Missouri, 300 miles, where it connects with the Midland Pacific in Nebraska. These two corporations, and also the Peoria and Rock Island (91 miles,) and the Davenport and St. Paul (300 miles,) although separate corporations, ARE CONTROLLED IN THE INTEREST OF THE INDIANAPOLIS, BLOOMINGTON AND WESTERN RAILWAY, and, practically, will be a united line of more than 1,200 miles, the through business of which will pass over the I., B. & W. This is an East and West trunk route and has no parallel competing line. The Eastern connections at Indianapolis are the Pennsylvania Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Bellefontaine, Lake Shore, and New-York Central, and other roads centering at this point. From the Sea-board to the West and North-west distances are materially reduced via this system of roads; so much so that it cannot fail to be the popular line for travel and business. Liberal subscriptions to the stock were made by towns and counties on the line of the EXTENSION, and the remainder has been taken by experienced railroad men and Eastern capitalists.

These facts cannot fail to make the bonds, which will be issued only on completed road, take high rank among the best railway securities.

The bonds are $1,000 each, convertible into stock at par, at the option of the holder, and may be registered free of charge.

Coupons, payable January and July 1, free of tax. The bonds may now be had from banks and bankers throughout the country.

We offer them at present at 90 and interest, and recommend them strongly to our friends and investors as one of the safest and most desirable securities on the market.

Bonds delivered free of express charges. Maps, pamphlets and circulars furnished on application.

ON TWEED'S TRACK.

Sheriff Jarvis After the "Boss" with New Warrants.

Two New Indictments Found Yesterday—Bench Warrants Issued by Judge Brady—Jarvis Confident of Capturing the "Boss."

The Grand Jury of the Court of Oyer and Terminer yesterday brought in two indictments. That they were against some member or members of the Ring was generally suspected, but not until a late hour last night did it transpire who the unfortunate really was.

Immediately after the Grand Jury handed the indictments into Court, Judge John R. Brady issued bench warrants for the arrest of William M. Tweed, on one indictment for felony and on the second for misdemeanor.

Having been placed in the Sheriff's hands, Mr. Judson Jarvis made a descent on the "Boss" retreat in Duane-street, but the bird had flown.

Williams, faithful and ever-watchful doorkeeper, recognized Mr. Jarvis before he had ascended the full flight of stairs leading to his master's sanctum, and with a kind of triumphant laugh he cried out: "Ah, Mr. Jarvis, you are too late; the master has gone away, Sir, and did not leave word when he would return."

Somewhat disappointed, Jarvis retraced his steps to his office, and dispatching one of his most trustworthy deputies in quest of the truant William, himself went to work.

At a late hour last night, the indefatigable Jarvis was seen as lively as a bat in the night air, and wearing looks of confidence that he would soon run his game to earth.

Jarvis would not give any information as to his own movements in the matter or what had been done, but the facts given above are all authoritative.

THE VIENNA EXPOSITION.

Appeal to American Exhibitors—Prospectus of the Exposition.

The visitors to the American Institute Fair at the Rink yesterday, listened to a brief address from Gen. Thos. B. Van Buren, United States Commissioner General, concerning the representation of American industry at the coming Exposition in Vienna, Austria. After pointing out the necessity of taking an interest in the Vienna Exposition, in order that our own World's Fair at Philadelphia might in turn indnce the contributions of foreign countries, the speaker argued that the presence of American machinery and inventions in foreign countries tended greatly to induce emigration, independent of the national pride which Americans would feel in exhibiting their inventive genius and manufacturing abilities to the world. The uncertainty of the Austrian Patent law, and the fear that the patents might be pirated, had been urged as a reason for withholding American inventions, but by a recent act of the Austrian Legislature, all foreign patents would be protected and patent-rights granted if desired.

Here the speaker exhibited a map of the grounds on which the Exposition is to be held, and a diagram of the buildings, showing preparations for an exhibition six times more extensive than that at Paris in 1867. The length of the main building will be 3,000 feet, the centre dome being more than double the size of that of St. Peter's, at Rome, and in addition there would be a machinery hall 2,600 feet in length. Baron Schwartz, who had charge of the arrangements, had promised to reserve the western transepts of both these buildings for the exhibition of articles from America, the position thus accorded being the best attainable. Very little had been done so far in the way of preparation, as it rested with Congress to relieve individual manufacturers of the cost of transmission, but he advised every one to have their articles ready to go immediately on the granting of an appropriation by Congress. Arrangements had been made to send copies of all newspapers, models of public schools, and specimens of the agricultural products of the West; but manufacturers and patentees were exhorted not to let our credit as industrious and ingenious people go by default.

Eli Perkins' Defense of the Heathen—A Large Audience Greets the New Lecturer.

A large and appreciative audience listened last evening in Association Hall to the maiden effort as a lecturer of Mr. M. D. Landon, familiarly known under the nom de plume of Eli Perkins. He betrayed nothing of the nervousness of beginners. When the applause that greeted his appearance had subsided, the lecturer, in a few happy sentences introduced the subject of his lecture, "The Defense of the Heathen." The defense of the heathen—that is of the scantily-clad heathen who roam through the wilds of Central Africa—consisted of a bitter attack on the heathen of modern society, as he appears in law, politics, love and religion. A certain Consider Perkins, uncle to Eli, of that ilk, was the fountain of inspiration from which the lecturer derived what he knew about heathenism. This worthy gentleman had travelled much in Central Africa with Mr. Stanley, and learned that all the young ladies there wore dreadful humps on their backs, went to balls with shoulders and necks uncovered, and then sat down on stair cases in cold draughts to talk with youthful male heathens until they caught the seeds of disease and became decrepid and deformed. In a similar strain the lecturer touched on all the fashionable foibles of the day, but with a delivery from which the subject matter derived much of its point. He next turned his attention to the heathenism of religion, and in this connection the ritualists of St. Albans were the objects of a severe attack. Indeed, all the ritualists, including the Roman and Greek Churches, were handled without gloves. A large part of the lecture was devoted to this subject. Patriotism, as illustrated by Mr. McFlannagan, who groaned over the wrongs of Ireland while dining off green seal and canvass-back ducks in Delmonico's, was placed before the audience in a few brilliant sentences, while the shallow match-making, fortune-hunting idea of matrimony that obtains in fashionable society, was photographed with a skill and humor that entitle Mr. Landon to a high place among our lecturers. The anomalies of New-York law were presented in a light that made one wonder how it was they had never come to view them from that standpoint before. The lecturer managed, during an hour and ten minutes, to enthrall the attention of his hearers, and frequently elicited their applause. As a lecturer, Eli Perkins is a decided success.

The District-Attorney Difficulty in Tammany.

The Conference Committee of twenty-one of the Tammany Judiciary Convention held a lengthened session at the hall, yesterday afternoon, to decide on a candidate for the position of District-Attorney. A majority of those present were in favor of nominating Mr. Charles Donohue, he being a gentleman against whom nothing could be said; but they hesitated to make up their final report recommending him to the Convention without the presence of all the members of the Committee. Mr. Garvin's strength in the Convention is the obstacle. He is immensely popular with the rowdy element of Tammany generally, and is strongly supported by the Tweed interest. This is so notorious that his own friends do not deny it; but they excuse it by saying that Mr. Garvin cannot prevent their supporting him, but that he has no interest in it. The Convention meets this afternoon, and the Committee will hold a final meeting before it assembles. The impression seems to be that, whatever the recommendation of the Committee may be, Mr. Garvin will be nominated by the Convention. In that case Mr. Kelly has declared that the defeat of the Tammany ticket is certain.

A Sensation Spoiled—The Missing Bridegroom.

An evening paper yesterday endeavored to make a sensation out of the disappearance of one John Farrell, of No. 68 Willett-street, who was to have been married on Tuesday evening, but who failed to put in an appearance at the appointed time, and who, as alleged by the paper, was found at midnight on Wednesday in Water-street almost lifeless, suffering from two terrible wounds on his head, and that he was still unconscious, and that $275 in cash and a diamond pin had been stolen from him. Sergt. Thompson, of the Fourth Precinct, who had been detailed to investigate the matter, reports that he found Farrell at his home apparently none the worse from the alleged brutal treatment to which he had been subjected. Farrell stated that while passing through Water-street he was suddenly struck on the head and became unconscious. He did not regain consciousness until late that night, when he returned home and was married. He claims to have been robbed of $280, but in regard to the diamond pin he says he never owned one. The Police are of the opinion that the man was on a "spree," and was not robbed at all. The Sergeant could not discover any marks of violence about his person.

A Challenger Nearly Murdered.

Mr. John Rea, a Grand-street (Brooklyn, E. D.,) liquor dealer, who had challenged several voters at the Thirteenth Ward Democratic primary, Wednesday night, was, while returning home from the primary, at 10½ o'clock, assaulted at the corner of Broadway and Sixth-street, E. D., by three men, who beat him on the head with a slug-shot, leaving him lying insensible on the sidewalk. His injuries are of a very serious nature, and his recovery is extremely doubtful. Rea is still delirious, so that he can give no information upon which to make any arrests.

THE VETERANS' BANQUET.

The Annual Dinner of the Society of the Army and Navy of the Gulf—Gathering of Distinguished Guests.

The reunion of the Society of the Army and Navy was brought to a close by a sumptuous banquet, last night, at the Metropolitan Hotel, of which over a hundred members partook. The dining-hall was handsomely decorated with the national colors, and on the table were masterpieces of the confectioners' art in the shape of a statuette of Sheridan, illustrating his famous "ride," and a model of the Hartford, with Farragut lashed to the mast. Admiral Thatcher sat at the head of the table, with Gen. McDowell, Gen. Forsyth, United States Army, and Surgeon-General Folsom, United States Navy, on his right; and Gen. Sargent, Gen. McKeever, United States Army, and Capt. Ransom, United States Navy, on his left. Among the other members present were Major Ewen, Capt. Emerson, Capt. Wiseman, Col. Washburne, Capt. Bonsher, Gen. Halstead, Col. Roome, U. S. M.; Col. Moore, U. S. N.; Major Montgomery, Capt. Ripley, Gen. Jacob Sharpe, Col. Peter French, Capt. Jewell, Lieut. James Wood, Capt. Alex. Strain, Dr. G. C. Smith, Gen. Molineux, Gen. Neafie, Dr. Rager, Dr. Watts, Capt. James Stewart, Dr. Foltz, U. S. N.; Gen. Sargent, Capt. J. Benton and others.

The Governor's Island band was stationed at the lower end of the room, and played an admirable selection of music during the entertainment. When the cloth was withdrawn, the Chairman proposed the first toast of the evening, "The President of the United States," and called upon Gen. Sargent to respond, which he did most happily. It was delicate ground to tread upon, however, politics being a forbidden subject of discussion by the Society. Speaking for Massachusetts, he ventured to say that in one solid column it believed in the President of the United States, [loud cheering,] and when at the end Gen. Sargent declared that the flag of the country was not likely to be disgraced by the Executive who guarded it, the cheering was repeated with increased vigor. The second toast, "The Memory of the Immortal Farragut, the Bayard of the Seas," was drank in solemn silence. The next, "The Commonwealth of New-York," was responded to by Major-Gen. MacDowell, who, after tracing the growth of the Empire State, said: "Whatever may be the future of New-York, I hope she may not decay from a disruption of the Union of which she is now the commercial head. The Constitution is a great thing, but the country is a greater one. I believed altogether that rather than we should give up the Union we should give up the Republic. [Cheers.] Rather than that, I would have submitted to any form of despotism under this simple view of the case: That, whereas, despotism was a disease for which there was a cure, disunion was a death from which there was no resurrection. [Enthusiastic cheering.] The other toasts were as follows:

4.—"The City of New-York, the metropolis of the Union." Col. Hawes.

5.—"The Army of the United States." Gen. Davis.

6.—"The Navy of the United States." Admiral Thatcher.

7.—"Our Citizen Soldiers." Gen. Halstead.

8.—"The Memory of the Heroic Dead," followed by "Our Sister Societies," "The Press," and "Woman."

Letters, expressing regret at their inability to attend the meeting, were read from Gen. Grant, Major-Gen. Meade, Gov. Hoffman, Hon. Schuyler Colfax, Gen. Belknap, and Gen. Burnside.

THE STANTON-DEMPSEY FRACAS.

Ante-Mortem Deposition of the Victim—Action of the Coroner—Rearrest of the Accused.

Coroner Young, at an early hour yesterday morning, took the ante-mortem statement of Lottie Stanton, the woman who is alleged to have been fatally beaten by Joseph Dempsey, Clerk of the Board of Assistant Aldermen.

Drs. Wynkoop and Steele, the attending physicians, still consider Miss Stanton to be in an exceedingly critical condition. Yesterday, Prof. James R. Wood called at the house of Miss Stanton to examine the patient. He consulted with Drs. Wynkoop and Steele, and, after an examination, came to the conclusion that not only is the woman not out of danger, but that she is in such a highly-critical condition that he is unable to give any definite hopes of her recovery. The physicians have serious fears that she is suffering from concussion of the brain, and there is great danger that an abscess will form on the brain, in which case her death is rendered almost a certainty. Another consultation will be held on Saturday.

Immediately after the ante-mortem examination, Coroner Young issued a warrant for the arrest of Dempsey, Bernstein, and Jones. Dempsey was taken from the Jefferson Market prison and remanded to the custody of Capt. Byrnes, of the Fifteenth Precinct, to await an opportunity of confronting him with his victim, in order that she may positively identify him. It is not considered safe to bring Dempsey into her presence in her present condition, as the excitement would doubtless prove very injurious to her. He will, therefore, be detained at the Mercer-street Police-station.

Bernstein, who was with Dempsey during the fracas, was arrested on Wednesday and held to bail in $5,000 by Justice Ledwith, and was rearrested yesterday on the warrant issued by Coroner Young. He is a young man of very stylish appearance, and in part proprietor of a fashionable drinking place on Broadway. Bernstein was brought to the Coroner's Office yesterday, and, Capt. Byrnes becoming responsible for his appearance, he was released until he can procure bail. John Jones, the companion of Dempsey and Bernstein, has not yet been arrested, and it is supposed that he has left the City. He is a member of the firm of Barrett & Jones, plumbers. He is a young man of considerable wealth, and is known as a sporting character.

Coroner Young having been informed that there had been several attempts to tamper with the witnesses in the case, has made out the necessary commitments and consigned them to the House of Detention, and has given orders that no one shall be allowed to see them except by his permission. The Police have taken charge of the house in which the injured woman is lying, and curiosity-seekers will be prevented from gaining access to the premises. At a late hour yesterday the condition of the patient was still unchanged. Delirium had again set in, and none but her immediate attendants are allowed to see her.

Westchester County Politics—Trouble Among the Democrats and Greeleyites.

The Democrats and Greeleyites of the First Assembly District of Westchester County, comprising the towns of Morrisania, West Chester, West Farms and Yonkers, held adjourned sessions of their respective Conventions to nominate a candidate for Assembly, at Yonkers, yesterday. A Committee of Conference was appointed by each Convention, with a view of uniting in their selection of a candidate. After a protracted conference, it was found that a satisfactory understanding could not be arrived at, the Greeleyites insisting upon the claims of Mr. Niles to a nomination, at the same time contending that the gentlemen who appeared to have the inside track in the Democratic Convention could not be supported by the soreheads, or even the respectable portion of their own party. On the other hand, the Democratic members insisted upon their right to nominate the candidate, and contended that Mr. Niles was not a strong candidate. Under these circumstances it was proposed that the two Conventions should hold a joint session and settle the whole question by joint ballot; but the report of the Democratic Committee and proposition of the Liberals to meet in joint Convention was laid on the table, and the Democratic Convention then proceeded to ballot, which resulted in favor of Hugh Lamoy, of West Chester.

A Committee which waited upon the Greeleyites to inquire whether the nominee would receive their support did not receive a reply.

The Greeleyites then renominated Hon. Wm. W. Niles, of Williams' Bridge, and Mr. Curtiss, of Yonkers, for School Commissioner.

The Democrats of the First School Commission District have nominated Mr. John Callan, of Fairmont, town of West Farms, for School Commissioner.

The Republicans of the same district have nominated Joseph H. Palmer for School Commissioner.

Drunk at Ten Years Old.

Officer Van Orden, of the Fourteenth Precinct, while on duty in Mott-street yesterday, had his attention drawn to the antics of a little boy, who had a large crowd gathered around him. The boy, who is named Andrew Galligan, of No. 280 Mulberry-street, and who is only ten years old, had procured whisky from a sloop in the vicinity and was drunk. The officer took the youngster into custody and brought him before Alderman Coman at the Tombs. When arraigned before the Alderman, Master Galligan amused the Court by singing, "Carry the News to Mary." Alderman Coman committed him.

FATHER BURKE'S LECTURE.

A Few Words About Mr. Froude's Speeches—The Volunteers of '82, and the Irish People.

Rev. Thomas Burke delivered a lecture last evening at the Academy of Music, on the "Volunteers of '82," in aid of the fund to rebuild the Girl's Catholic Protectory, Westchester County, recently destroyed by fire. The stage was filled with clergymen of the Roman Catholic Church, including Bishop Lynch, of Charleston. The body of the hall was densely packed, and owing to the recent lecture of Mr. Froude, to which it was expected Mr. Burke would reply, considerable anxiety to procure admission was manifested. Mr. Burke, who appeared in the habit of his order, prefaced his subject by stating that he never knew an Englishman to have resided in Ireland for any length of time but he became Ipse Hibernesis Hibernicre—more Irish than the Irish themselves. Such a one, said Mr. Burke, is now among us—a man great in learning and profound in knowledge. But though the gentleman referred to should get all credit for his intentions, which were doubtless honorable and well-meaning, no person knew how the shoe pinched better than he who wore it. "The "Golden Age of Ireland"—an age to which Irishmen looked back with so much pride—and which was said to have existed before the Norman invasion—was stated by that gentleman to be an age of internal dissensions, bloodshed and massacre. Mr. Burke explained that the "golden age" was prior to the invasion of the Danes in the latter part of the third century. A desolating war, of successive invasions extending over 300 years, had devastated the land prior to the landing of the Norman adventurers, and the country had not recovered from the effects of this protracted struggle when the English landed. It had been said that the Danes remained in Ireland. Yes, said Mr. Burke, they were allowed to remain in certain cities, on condition of becoming Catholics, adopting Irish customs and paying a yearly tribute to the King of Ireland. It had also been said that the Normans were a sort of "policemen," sent to restore order in Ireland. If, said Mr. Burke, they were worthy of their chief, Henry II., they were, no doubt, an efficient body. The lecturer then proceeded to give a history of that monarch, and quoted St. Bernard's character of the Plantagenets, and drew a vivid picture of the murder of Thomas à Beckett. The only opposition which Henry received in Ireland was from St. Lawrence O'Toole, Archbishop of Dublin. The prelate brought 60,000 men to the gates of Dublin. If, asked Mr. Burke, Henry had such a document as the alleged bull of Adrian, he could have paralyzed the opposition of O'Toole by its production. It was, he alleged, never spoken of or produced until after the death of Adrian. It had also been asserted by this able historian that at the time of the landing of the adventurers the Irish were wretched and miserable, living in caves, and burrowing in the earth like rabbits. Yes, but he would ask his audience to remember the three centuries of the remorseless wars with the Danes. "No evidences of the arts of building or former civilization, but a few Cyclopean works and a half-dozen of round towers." Why! I ask but for one round tower, one old ruin, to convince any person of the existence of what now is thought to be denied—those who could build one could build twenty; one is evidence of a knowledge of the grand science of architecture. We are asked to believe that in the glorious American Revolution the Catholics were for England and the Protestants were in favor of the colonies. What is the fact? The English King asked the Irish Parliament, composed strictly of Protestants, 4,000 Irishmen to fight against struggling liberty, and he got them; and His Most Gracious Majesty gave in return 4,000 Hessians to keep down the refractory Irish. It was, said he, out of that glorious and successful war that arose the most magnificent event of Irish history, "The Volunteers of '82." Mr. Burke then proceeded to show that it was the policy of the English Government since they first got footing in Ireland to foster the petty jealousy of the chiefs, their motto being then as now, "Divide and Conquer." He accepted the word of the great historian now among us, that the day Ireland would be united she will be invincible. Why, then, said he, seek to make one Ireland for the Catholic and one for his Protestant fellow-countryman? Mr. Burke then proceeded with the subject of his lecture and told the history of the rise and fall of the Volunteers, and concluded by a fervid appeal to his countrymen to unite on a broad and liberal basis for the salvation of their common country.

Sheriff.—An informal vote was taken, resulting in the choice of Thos. Faron, ex-Controller.

Commissioners of Charities.—Gen. Thomas Francis Bourke, a prominent Fenian, and John J. White, Ex-County Treasurer.

Justice of the Sessions.—John Dowling, a reporter and late a Justice of the Peace in East New-York.

The nominations for City officers were:

City Judge.—Daniel P. Barnard.

Police Justice.—James Eschwege.

Meeting of German Saloon-Keepers, and Discussion of Their Grievances.

At the Teutonia Assembly Rooms, in Third-avenue, a mass-meeting of German saloon-keepers was held yesterday, for the purpose of discussing certain grievances of theirs, and to adopt measures to remedy the same. Addresses were delivered by Messrs. Paul Falk, Haffner, Haas, Bopp and others, from whose remarks it appears that their grievances are principally based upon the various provisions of the Sunday abuse of the Excise law, and a system of cheating by the brewers in furnishing short measure. It is proposed to apply to the Legislature to enact a law providing that the casks in which the beer is furnished to the retailers shall be stamped, thereby compelling the brewers to furnish full measure. It was decided to address a memorial on these points to the next Legislature, and a committee was formed to submit a draft of such a memorial to a meeting of delegates to be held in the course of a week.

The Baptist Association and the Lee-Avenue Church.

The Baptist Association of Long Island are in session at Babylon. On Wednesday a discussion took place in reference to the Lee-avenue Baptist Church, and Brother Houghton, Treasurer of the Association, offered the following:

Whereas, Rumors are in circulation, sustained by sundry publications by the pastors of the Lee-Avenue Baptist Church, and the Hanson-place Baptist Church, members of this association, that said churches have departed from the practice of the ordinances of the gospel, as explained and followed by all regular Baptist churches, of which alone the association is presumed to be composed;

Therefore, That it be referred to a special committee of five to make investigation as to such rumors, and report the facts touching the position of said churches in that regard to the Association at its next annual meeting.

After a long and warm discussion, a motion to lay on the table was carried by a majority of 34 to 24.

Seizure of Smuggled Cigars.

The gate-keeper at Pier No. 21 North River, while attending to the duties of his post, yesterday, noticed a suspicious looking package, partially covered with straw, in the bottom of a wagon which was about being driven from the pier. He took the package from the wagon, and found it contained 500 cigars, which were being smuggled into the city. While he was making the examination, the man in the wagon drove away rapidly. Customs officers Lee and Brown pursued and effected the capture of the horse, wagon, harness and blanket among the teams in Fulton Market.

Thirty-one boxes of Havana cigars were recently seized at Charles-street Station-house, for non-payment of duties, by Stephen S. Doty and R. Hastings, Custom-house Inspectors. They were supposed to have been landed from the French steamer, at Pier No. 50 North River.

Burglars at Work on Long Island.

On Wednesday night the Washington Hotel, in Babylon, was entered by thieves. They rolled the safe out to the horse-stable and blew it open. In it was $197 and some papers. The papers were found under the railroad depot yesterday morning. About 2 o'clock the same morning the Sumpwam Hotel was entered and the safe rolled into the street. A wagon was taken from the yard and the safe carried about a mile away and blown open. It was shattered to pieces, so that what little money it contained was not found.

The Street-Watering Contract.

In the case of Thomas Canary against the City, the facts of which have already appeared in the TIMES, Judge Ingraham has granted a writ of mandamus to compel the Board of Audit to allow, and Controller Green to pay, the entire sum of $15,000, embraced in the act of the Legislature, for street watering. It was claimed on the part of the Controller that the work done did not exceed in value $4,500.

We desire it to be understood that the impostor using the name of R. C. Davenport, who represents himself as a TIMES reporter, is not Mr. R. B. Davenport, an honorable gentleman attached to the Herald.

The Commissioners of Docks met yesterday. The Treasurer's report showed a balance of $198,233 on the 30th of September. The Secretary was directed to apply to the Controller for $600,000 due the Department.

Yesterday, at Jefferson Market Police Court, before Justice Ledwith, Patrick McGinty, a hack-driver, was held for trial on a charge of having snatched a watch and chain, valued at $38, from Richard Johnson, of No. 173 Greene-street.

Prospect Park Fair Grounds—Third Day of the Meeting—Pleasant Weather and Large Attendance.

The October meeting of the Prospect Park Fair Grounds is drawing to a close. Yesterday was the third day of the meeting, and as there were two good races on the programme, besides the conclusion of the double-team race of the preceding day, there was a numerous assemblage of spectators. The proceedings began with the unfinished double-team race, the contestants being George Wilkes and Honest Allen and the black geldings Plympton and Darkness. Both the teams made several breaks during the heat, and the time was consequently slow, viz., 2:43½. The race was won by Allen and Wilkes. Time—2:31, 2:34, 2:34½, 2:43½.

The first regular race of the day was the purse of $1,000, for 2:38 horses, two miles and repeat, which had the following five entries, viz.: W. Wellington's br. g. Wellington; James McKee's b. m. Young Thorn; Frank Loomis' s. g. Constitution; C. S. Green's s. g. Wallace, and W. C. Trimble's b. g. Commodore. Wallace being out of condition was withdrawn, and among the others Commodore was the favorite. He won in 5d6 and 5:14½. Wellington being second, Young Thorn third.

The next event was the purse of $1,200, for horses that had never beaten 2:28, for which were entered J. S. Parkes' b. s. Dauntless, D. Pfifer's ch. m. Grace Bertram, J. W. Briggs, b. m. Lady Rose, Frank Ellis' b. m. Nettie, L. C. Chase's gr. g. Doubtful, and J. J. Bowen's gr. s. Ben Flagler. All but Doubtful appeared, and a stirring contest ensued, but darkness coming on the race was postponed until today at 12 o'clock, after three heats had been trotted.

TODAY'S PROGRAMME.

This will be the great day of the meeting, and the Association has made preparations for entertaining a great crowd. The principal event will be the Free-for-all Purse, in which Camors, Rosalind, Gazelle, George Palmer and Judge Fullerton are entered and will start. As the horses are very equally matched in speed, the contest will be stubborn, and the winner will have to trot below 2:20. The Four-year-old Stake will follow, and five youngsters are in it, all of them well bred.
